HAYWOOD HEARS COURT DEFINE LAW THAT GOVERNS HIS CASE

JUDGE DELIVERS HAYWOOD CHARGE

Intense Feeling in Court Room as Words That May Seal Prisoner's Doom or Set Him Free Were Pronounced—Regarded as Favorable to the Defendant.

Unless there is some evidence other than the evidence of Orchard which tends to connect the defendant with the offence charged, without the aid in any degree of said Orchard, there can be no conviction in this case.— Judge Wood to jury in Haywood case.

BOISE, Idaho, July 27.—Amidst deep silence on the part of an audience that crowded the courtroom, interrupted only by the anxious sighs of the women relatives of William D. Haywood, now on trial for alleged complicity in the murder of former Governor Frank Steunenberg, Judge Wood delivered his final charge to the jury to-day, and the case of the defendant now rests with the twelve men who for months have listened to the evidence presented in the great legal battle.

The courtroom became hushed as, in clear voice, the judge began to deliver his instructions to the jury.

For the moment all interest became centred in the words that will have such a great bearing upon the verdict of the jury. As the charge progressed, the counsel for the defence seemed to gain new courage, for, according to legal experts, if Haywood is to gain his freedom he will owe this to that charge more than to anything else.

"Mere probabilities are not sufficient to warrant a conviction," declared the learned Judge in his analysis of the evidence submitted by the State, "nor is it sufficient that the greater weight or preponderance of the evidence supports the allegation of the indictment."

After congratulating the jurors on the discharge of their duties the judge delivered his charge as follows:

"In your consideration of this case, it is your duty under your oaths as jurors to accept the law as given by the court without limitation or reservation. It is your duty to apply the law given by the court to the facts shown by the evidence. At the same time you are the exclusive judges of the facts, of what has been proven in the case, of the credibility of the witnesses, and the weight to be given to the testimony of each and all of them.

Reminds Jurors of Their Duty.

"In determining the question of the guilt or innocence of the defendant you will only consider such evidence as has been admitted by the court; you will not consider as evidence any statement made by counsel for either the State or the defendant, nor should you consider any testimony which may have been objected to and excluded or stricken out upon the trial of the cause. You should adhere strictly to your duties as jurors to try the issues in this case upon the evidence and find a verdict in accordance therewith."

The court then instructed the jury entirely to dismiss and disregard the testimony of Orchard wherein he related that Pettibone told him that Steve Adams said that he (Adams) had killed a man in northern Idaho. The State failed to connect this murder with the conspiracy alleged. Resuming the court continued:

Bars Deportation Testimony

"I instruct you that in considering this case you will entirely disregard all evidence, introduced by the defence and upon rebuttal, in relation to the deportations of miners and other persons in the Telluride country, as well as evidence relating to the destruction of property belonging to the Western Federation of Miners in the same country. You will also disregard all evidence, introduced by the defence and upon rebutal, in relation to deportations of miners and other acts of violence, including the destruction of property belonging to the local unions of the Western Federation of miners in the Cripple Creek district after the alleged explosion of the Independence depot as testified to in this case.

"And you will further disregard all evidence introduced by the defence relating to detectives of the Pinkerton agency having been placed in the local unions of the Western Federation of Miners.

"The defendant at the outset of the trial is presumed to be an innocent man, and he is not required to prove himself innocent; this presumption of innocence has the weight and effect of evidence in the defendant's behalf

BIG CRUISER IS LAUNCHED WITH CHEERS

The United States scout cruiser Salem was launched at 11:55 a. m. to-day at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant at Quincy in the presence of a large crowd of city officials of Salem and hundreds of representative citizens from Boston, Quincy and many other South Shore towns and cities.

Former Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, gave the signal to start the big steel hull of the Salem down the ways.

Pretty Miss Lorna Pinnock, fourteen years of age, daughter of Mayor Joshua G. Pinnock of Salem, christened the boat just as the sharp bows of the cruiser were starting for the water.

Maids Dressed in White.

Two maids of honor were by Miss Pinnock's side as she smashed the traditional bottle of champagne against the ship's bows. The maids of honor were Miss Doris Lougee and Miss Jeannett Lee, of Salem. Miss Pinnock and her maids of honor were charmingly dressed in white dresses and the fair christener carried a large bouquet of roses.

Fully 150 residents of Salem stood by the launching stand while society people of Boston and other Massachusetts cities and towns were conspicuous in the throng.

After the Salem had been launched into the bay the guests of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company were taken to the large and left of the works where a banquet was prepared. After the good things had been disposed of Rear Admiral Bowles, for the company, made a pleasing address in which he told of what sort of craft the Salem was and what is to be expected of her.

Response by Mayor Pinnock.

The response was by Mayor Pinnock of Salem and former District Attorney of Essex County Alden P. White.

FORTS REINFORCED BY MILITIA IN WAR GAME

ARTILLERY JOINS IN DEFENCE OF COAST NOW THEORETICALLY IN PERIL.

The long discussed "war game" is on today. The garrisons of the harbor forts have been reinforced by the corps of coast artillery, M. V. M., under command of Colonel Charles P. Nutter, and the Fifth Infantry, under Colonel William H. Oakes. They will help to resist the attacks to be made upon the forts during the next eight days.

The coast artillerymen rendezvoused at their armory to-day, and after a light lunch marched to Rowe's wharf, where a special steamer took the various companies to the various forts. The boys of the Fifth Infantry met at the wharf without any parade, and were sent along as fast as they arrived. Headquarters of the Fifth will be at the Edgemere Inn, near Fort Revere.

On Guard at Forts.

The militiamen will find everything ready for them at the various forts upon their arrival. For several days details from their organizations have been at work preparing quarters and taste

There will be little excitement to-day and to-morrow, but on Monday and Tuesday there will be drills and manoeuvres at night to test the efficiency of the searchlight service.

From Wednesday morning until 12m on Friday the forts will be at all times theoretically in great danger from the enemy and incessant vigilance will be exercised against attacks.

Plenty of Ammunition.

There will be plenty of ammunition served out to regulars and militia alike, and it will be the "real thing" in the way of sham warfare.

During the week both the men and officers of the militia will profit by instruction by regulars.

AUSTRIAN TOWN IN FLAMES.

LONDON, July 27.—The town of Terbenoschia, near Marienbad, Austria-Hungary, is burning, according to a message to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Carlsbad.

SCHOONER ON CHATHAM BAR LIES IN PERIL

CHATHAM, July 27.—The two-masted British schooner Bobs of Farrsboro, N. S., with a cargo of 94,000 feet of hemlock boards, is ashore on Chatham Bar and is full of water. The Bobs anchored close in under the Chatham Beach soon after midnight on account of a sudden gale of wind coming on from the northwest which had caused the schooner to leak badly.

When the tide ebbed this morning the schooner began to pound on the bottom, and at low tide she was found to be full of water and hard and fast on the bottom between the outer and inner bars.

The life-saving stations not being manned, some wreckers went to her, but the captain declined assistance from shore, hoping his vessel may float at high water and drift out over the bar, whence he may be towed to destination.

CHAFFEE BUYS ESTATE.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—General Adna R. Chaffee, recently chief of staff of the United States Army, has purchased the handsome Edwards residence, on Magnolia avenue, for $17,000. It will be occupied by General Chaffee and his family early in September

Harry Orchard's Story Must Be Corroborated, Declares Judge Wood

BURDEN OF PROOF RESTS WITH STATE, HE SAYS TO THE JURY.

and should continue until it is overcome by competent evidence which displaces any reasonable doubt, which you might otherwise have of the defendant's guilt.

"Mere probabilities are not sufficient to warrant a conviction, nor is it sufficient that the greater weight or preponedrance of the evidence supports the allegation of the indictment.

"If you believe from the evidence in this case that the State has failed to make out a case against the defendant, beyond a reasonable doubt, you have no right to convict the defendant for a failure to produce testimony upon his part, or for the absence of testimony.

Mere Suppositions Do Not Count.

"If, however, it appears that either party has failed to produce any material evidence which would meet, explain or rebut material evidence which has been introduced against him, the failure to produce such evidence may be considered by the jury in determining the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

"Under the law, no jury should convict a citizen or citizens of a crime upon mere supposition, however strong, but before the jury can lawfully convict, they must be convinced of the defendant's guilt beyond all reasonable doubt.

"If it is possible for you to reconcile the facts in this case upon any reasonable theory consistent with the innocence of the defendant, William D. Haywood, it is your duty to do so and find the defendant not guilty.

Proof Burden Rests with State.

"The defendant in this case is charged as a principal under our statute, which provides that the distinction between an accessory before the fact and a principal, and between principals in the first and second degree in cases of felony is abrogated. While this statute does away with the former method of charging an accessory before the fact, it does not do away with the essential elements of proof with respect to such an accessory."

Judge Wood said that while it was not claimed Haywood was personally present at the time of the commission of the offence charged, it was claimed that he advised and encouraged its commission.

The burden of establishing this fact, however, was upon the the State. If they have failed to establish the fact, Haywood must be found not guilty. The State has attempted to prove the defendant's connection with a general conspiracy to those opposed to the plans of the Western Federation of Miners, and the killing of Steunenberg was one of the offences perpetrated.

Lays Stress on Reasonable Doubt.

"You are charged," continued Judge Wood, "that there is but one offence for which the defendant is on trial, and that evidence of other offences has been received for the sole purpose of determining whether or not such general conspiracy existed, and, particularly, whether or not the offence charged in the indictment was a part and parcel of that general conspiracy. The defendant cannot be convicted unless the State has established beyond a reasonable doubt that he is guilty of the crime charged in the indictment, to wit, the felonious killing of Frank Steunenberg.

"The evidence which has been permitted to go before you of the commission of offences in other places cannot be received or considered by you as supplying any deficiency whatsoever in the evidence with respect to the killing of Frank Steunenberg.

"In this case, it is incumbent upon the State to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a combination of a conspiracy was formed, and if the killing of Frank Steunenberg was by virtue of a common design of such conspiracy, then the said defendant is guilty and it would be immaterial whether he was actually present at the time of killing or not.

Must Corroborate Accomplice.

"And you are further instructed that such a conspiracy cannot be established by the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.

"If you find the defendant did no overt act in carrying out the conspiracy, even though you should be satisfied from the evidence that the defendant knew of the conspiracy and did not dissent from it, such knowledge on the part of the defendant would be insufficient to warrant you in presuming that he was guilty of the crime charged.

"It is for the jury to say from all of the facts and circumstances received in evidence, whether or not such a conspiracy existed. And in such case not only must the felony charge be proven beyond a reasonable doubt before there can be a conviction, but the conspiracy must, likewise, be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, or the defendant is entitled to an acquittal.

"The burden of establishing the facts that a combination and conspiracy was formed to kill Frank Steunenberg, and that the defendant was a party thereto, and that the said Steunenberg was killed in pursuance of said conspiracy, is upon the prosecution throughout, and, if the prosecution has failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt each and every one of these facts, you should acquit the defendant.

"The act of one conspirator in furtherance of the conspiracy is the act of all.

"The witness, Harry Orchard, claims that he was an accomplice in the commission of the offence charged in the indictment. Under the statutes of this State a person cannot be convicted of a crime upon the testimony of an accomplice unless such accomplice is corroborated by other evidence, which, of itself and without the aid of the testimony of the accomplice, tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offence charged, and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offence or the circumstances thereof.

"By corroborative evidence is meant additional evidence of a defendant character to the same point.

"In order to ascertain whether or not the testimony of the accomplice is corroborated, you should eliminate from the case the evidence of the accomplice and examine the evidence of the other witnesses, with the view to ascertaining if there is evidence tending to connect the defendant with the offence. If there is, the accomplice is corroborated; if there is not inculpatory evidence, there is no corroboration, though the accomplice may be corroborated in regard to any number of facts sworn to by him.

"Unless there is some evidence other than the evidence of Orchard, which tends to connect the defendant with the offence charged, without the aid in any degree of the testimony of the said Orchard, there can be no conviction in this case.

"And in determining whether or not the circumstances offered and received in evidence tend to show such connection, it is your duty to consider all such circumstances in the light of the presumption that they are innocent in themselves, if they so appear; and if such circumstances, when so considered, are consistent with any hypothesis of innocence, it is your duty to give to such circumstances that consideration and to acquit the defendant.

"An accomplice cannot corroborate himself by his own words or deeds. The corroboration to satisfy the statute must come from some independent source. When the proof of a conspiracy is circumstantial a defendant's connection with it must be obtained by evidence of his own acts and declarations—not those of others.

"If you believe from the evidence herein, that the witness, Harry Orchard, was induced or influenced to become a witness and to testify in this case by any promise of immunity from prosecution or punishment, or by any hope held out to him that, if he testified against the defendant, he would not be prosecuted or punished, then the jury should take such facts into consideration in determining the weight which ought to be given to testimony so obtained.

Such testimony should be received by the jury with caution and scrutinized with great care.

"If from the evidence it appears that any favors have been extended by the authorities of the State of Idaho to the witness, Harry Orhcard, and there is any promise, either expressed or implied, of further favors to be received by him on account of his testimony in this case, then they are matters for the consideration of this juryas affecting the credibility of the said Orchard's testimony.

"The court has allowed to be received in evidence two decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado. Such opinions are received for the purpose of determining the question of motive only.

"Certain articles have been received in evidence from the Miners' Magazine. These articles should not be considered by the jury as evidence of the existence or non-existence of any fact or facts stated in them or either of them. This evidence was received for the sole purpose of determining whether or not any motive existed upon the part of the defendant to participate in the offence charged in the indictment, and not for the purpose of establishing, in any wise, the commission of such an offence.

"If the jury find that the evidence of the witness, Orchard, has been contradicted by other witnesses, it is their duty to take into consideration all of the facts and circumstances surrounding the testimony of said Orchard in the light of the testimony given by such contradicting witnesses. The fact that he has been charged with the murder of Frank Steunenberg; the fact that he confessed himself to be guilty of that murder; the fact of his imprisonment under the charge of that murder; the facts and circumstances surrounding that imprisonment, and the fact that none of the witnesses so contradicting him, other than the defendant and the witness Moyer, are under any charge in connection with the offense charged or complicity therein, and from all of such facts and circumstances, the jury will determine what weight shall be given to the testimony of all the witnesses in that respect.

"Under the indictment in this case the defendant may, if the evidence warrants it, be convicted of murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree, manslaughter, or you may find him not guilty.

"A reasonable doubt as used throughout these instructions, is such a doubt as a prudent and reasonable man would be likely to act upon in determining the important affairs of life.

"You are to determine the question as to whether or not the defendant killed and murdered Frank Steunenberg as charged in the indictment, or aided and abetted such killing. If so, you should find him guilty; if not you should find him not guilty."

WOMEN WHO ANXIOUSLY AWAIT HAYWOOD VERDICT

The Haywood Trial at a Glance

POINTS AGAINST HAYWOOD.

Harry Orchard's story that he was paid by Haywood and the officers of the Miners' Federation to murder Governor Steunenberg and others.

The miners' organization kept in its executive board, of which Haywood was a member, Jack Simpkins, after he had fled from an indictment and after it had been confessed by Orchard that Simpkins was implicated in murder.

Jack Simpkins received $100 from Haywood, to be given to Murderer Orchard.

Haywood and Moyer retained counsel for Orchard when he was arrested for the Steunenberg murder and paid his counsel $1,500.

Letters and statement of Orchard showing that Haywood paid him large sums at various times just before and after murders.

Governor Steunenberg had been a menace to Miners' Federation and its officials wanted him out of the way. He had prosecuted them because of Coeur d'Alenes mine outrages, in which many were killed.

Although Haywood was in Denver when Governor Steunenberg was killed, he is said to have been in communication with Orchard up to time of crime, and to have kept him supplied with money.

POINTS FOR HAYWOOD.

Harry Orchard, the confessed murderer of Governor Steunenberg and many others, is not only a criminal of the most brutal type but his unsubstantiated evidence cannot be believed.

Witnesses whom Orchard testified knew that Haywood planned various crimes in which he participated have positively denied all his statements.

Witnesses told of connection between Orchard and Pinkerton detectives, who were seeking to exterminate the Federation of Miners and get Haywood out of the way.

Much of evidence introduced was shown by defence to have been supplied by Mine Owners' Association, which, as head of union miners, Haywood fought.

Orchard had grudge against Steunenberg, whom he accused of causing him to lose his interest in Hercules mine.

No evidence, outside of unsubstantiated testimony of Orchard, to connect Haywood with attempts on lives of Governor Peabody, Judge Goddard and Gabber, Sherman Bell and Herne, or murder of Governor Steunenberg.

Orchard had a mania to kill. Haywood was always mild mannered and his reputation was generally good.

Orchard had a grievance against Governor Steunenberg whom he killed.

Defence claims Orchard has lied about Haywood to save himself from paying penalties for his crimes.

JUDGE WARNS LAW-BREAKING BOYS' PARENTS

"You are encouraging your children to do wrong. If you do not withdraw your appeals I will have you prosecuted," said Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court to-day, speaking to the parents of three boys who were there arraigned before him.

The boys, Thomas Woodford, thirteen years old; Richard Henderson, fourteen, and Eugene Mollway, sixteen, were charged with having broken into the grocery of Frank Danielson in Emerson street and the tobacco shop of George Gibson at Athens and F streets on July 17.

They were found guilty to-day and Judge Fallon sentenced them to indefinite terms at the Suffolk School for Boys on Rainsford's Islands.

At the suggestion of their parents the three appealed.

The parents of Mollway and Henderson withdrew their appeal on the judge's warning. Mrs. Woodford said she would do nothing till she heard from her husband. Judge Fallon directed that the husband be brought to court.

"It is a shame," the judge said, "that parents should encourage children to try to escape the consequence of wrong doings."

GREATEST WARSHIP IS LAUNCHED

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., July 27.—With the launching of the battleship Bellerophon, England's second vessel of the Dreadnought class, to-day, the largest and most powerful warship in the world took the water. Princess Henry of Battenberg christened the huge ship, and thousands of persons attended the launching.

The Bellerophon is of 18,500 tons, against the Dreadnought's 17,900 tons, is 490 feet long and of 82 feet beam. Her engines are of 23,000 horse power, guaranteeing a speed of 20.23 knots.

Ten 12-inch guns, distributed in five turrets, constitute the main battery.

YOUNG MAN SEEKS TO BE FREE OF GUARDIAN

Henry Ray Watson, twenty-two years old and worth $60,000, has applied to the Probate Court in Worcester for a discharge from guardianship. He is working in Boston now and lives in Newton. He used to live at Leicester. William Holden of Leominster is his guardian, it being alleged that the young man is a spendthrift.

HORDES OF HOME COMERS ARE SPEEDING TO BOSTON

EXTRA CARS AND TRAINS BRING THOUSANDS FOR HUB'S GREAT FETE.

From the North, West and South thousands of sons and daughters of old Boston are flocking homeward for Old Home Week.

Every train from distant points arriving over the lines of the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany and the New Haven roads to-day had extra cars attached. To-night the incoming traffic is expected by railroad passenger agents to become a record-breaker, and by to-morrow and Monday each railroad intends, if necessary, to put on special trains from both local and distant points to handle the influx of home-weekers.

Even the trolley lines that enter the Hub are prepared to take care of a larger traffic than ever before. The Boston & Worcester Street Railway Company intends to run cars every fifteen minutes between the "Heart of the Commonwealth" and Boston. The Boston & Northern Railway will put on extra cars, and the Boston Elevated expects to handle locally more passengers than at any other time in the history of the street car traffic in Greater Boston.

Baggage Is Piling Up.

The New Haven road issued the following statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day:

"We expect to handle an extremely heavy traffic from now on. All of our superintendents and other officials have arranged for plenty of extra cars—and whole trains if need be—for the outlook is for the heaviest travel in the history of our road toward Boston. We will leave nothing undone to give the public the best and safest service. The biggest days we look forward to are Veteran Firemen's and Military Days."

The Boston & Albany reports increased traffic all along the division, with extra cars coming in from the West. On the Boston & Maine to-day it was expected that at least two expresses from the West and North would have to be made into two sections each. In Canada, in Maine, and all over New England the sale of reduced rate tickets for Old Home Week has been enormous.

The various steamship lines are also ready to handle increased traffic from local and New England points. The lines extending South and North report staterooms and berths engaged ahead far into the week.

Already Old Home Week baggage is piling up at the North and South Union stations. The several transportation and express companies are having their hands full receiving excursionists' baggage.

Hotels Will Be Crowded.

At the hotels rooms are being engaged for the entire week, and the overflow is to be so large that even the lodging houses will find next week a money maker, for it is not thought now that the hotels, large and small, will have room enough to shelter all of the home-comers who intend to spend the week in the Hub.

In the civic and trades parade on Wednesday night will appear a unique float—that of the Henry Siegel Company. It will be an exact reproduction of an Italian pergola. The idea was conceived by J. R. Patton, head of the decorating staff at the store. The float will be twenty-four feet long and fourteen feet high.

The last piece of work preparatory to turning on the current for the big electrical illumination has been completed. When dusk falls to-night more than 15,000 electric bulbs will light the way to Boston from all directions.

Nineteen Illuminations.

There will be nineteen distinct illuminations in the city proper, surpassing anything ever before attempted in the city. They will include the electrical fountain on the Common, the two arches in Dewey square, the Public Garden bridge, the "Old Home" signs at City Hall, Franklin's birthplace, Morse birthplace, the long path on the Common, Soldier's Monument, illuminated flag on the Common, "Welcome to Boston" on the waterfront, the Public Library, Evacuation Monument at South Boston, the waving flag at the Old State House, the torches along the Tremont and Boylston street malls of the Common, the Old North Church beacon and the illumination at Charlestown City Hall.

PARISHIONERS COME BACK FOR FRANCIS DE SALES OUTING

Old Home Week at Roxbury was inaugurated to-day by the annual picnic and games of the parishioners of St. Francis de Sales, at Caledonia Grove, West Roxbury. Many of the old parishioners joined in the reunion, some of them coming from distant points.

An elaborate program for the afternoon includes a baseball game between the Eliot Athletic Club and the Brooksides and tugs-of-war between the Roxburys and the Institute of Roxbury, Division 3 and Division 18 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the Owl Club and the Ward 18 Democratic Club. A balloon ascension follows.

After the games there will be reception to the visitors by the Rev. D. J. O'Farrell, assisted by the Rev. Cornelius Herlihy, Charles A. O'Brien and John H. Harrigan.

This evening there will be dancing. The elaborate arrangements for the day's outing have been prepared by Father Harrigan. The proceeds will be applied to the cost of the extensive repairs being made on the church edifice.

BIG OUTING OF ST. PHILIP'S PARISHIONERS

Everything is ready for the big outing of the parishioners of St. Philip's Church, South End, which takes place to-day and this evening on the grounds of the Commonwealth Motor and Driving Club, Mt. Auburn.

Two balloon ascensions will be features of the elaborate entertainment programme. At the ascension as 3 o'clock there will be a 5,000-foot parachute drop. To-night's ascension will be at 8 o'clock, beginning the fireworks display.

The Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, rector of St. Philip's, has the hearty co-operation of his parishioners for this outing. About 8,000 people are expected. It is hoped to net a good sum for the church building fund.

There is a baseball game at 10 a. m., and a second game this afternoon. A long list of athletic events will be run off. These, with a vaudeville program, fireworks, music and other diversions, will afford amusement for old and young.

The free theatre programme is being enlarged by several features, the clown band is operating in perfect unison. Extraordinary pony and dog exhibitions are attracting thousands. The equilibrists and other circus features are daily becoming more interesting.

Stage Manager Adams has re-engaged James M. Herbert, the "Little Man with the Big Voice," who sings with the park band and with Brigham's orchestra, rendering "Vanity Fair," "Connemara," and Don Ramsay's newest songs throughout the week.

A new big carousal and a Japanese village have been added to the park attractions.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN publishes a ticket of admission to the park and the open-air performances, good for use on five days, Monday to Friday inclusive.

WINK AT FISH LAW VIOLATION, SAYS HAMLIN

Charges that the police steamer Lexington is not enforcing the fish protection laws in Buzzard Bay waters are made by the Hon. Charles S. Hamlin of Boston and Mattapoisett, newly elected president of the Old Colony Club.

Other members of this club, which is composed of Summer residents along the shores of Buzzard Bay, back up Mr. Hamlin in his assertions. Plans are afoot for calling the attention of Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., to the alleged state of affairs.

The matter came to an issue at the annual meeting of the Old Colony Club at Charles W. Howland's famous inn, Faban's Folly, at South Dartmouth, near New Bedford. In reviewing the history of the club, President Hamlin said in part:

"It has been an eventful year for the club. We have had to fight the pirates who have been trying to have the Legislature change the fishery laws of Buzzards Bay that they might legally take the wealth of its products.

"It is the duty of every member of this club—of every member—to see that the laws of Massachusetts regarding the use of traps and pounds be enforced.

"There are reports that the police steamer Lexington is not enforcing the fishery laws in Buzzard's Bay. The Lexington was put down in these waters for business, and it is our first duty after this feast is over to call the attention of the Governor of this Commonwealth to the flagrant violations of the laws as carried on in the waters of Buzzard's Bay.

EDDY DEFENCE SCORES TWO SIGNAL VICTORIES

"NEXT FRIENDS" MUST PRESENT THEIR ENTIRE EVIDENCE BY AUGUST 13.

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., July 27.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy has won two significant victories in the litigation now in progress in which her son, George W. Glover, and others as "next friends" seek to compel an accounting by Calvin A. Frye and his associates in the management of the Eddy estate.

She is to have a speedy trial of the question of her competency to conduct her own financial affairs. Counsel for the "next friends" is denied the opportunity of "fishing" for evidence by means of depositions of her friends. The hearing will be held on Tuesday, August 13, at 11:30 o'clock.

During the entire day, except while the documents pertaining to the case were being read, the battle was waged upon these two points. Underlying the whole litigation, is the question of Mrs. Eddy's mental strength. If this question should be decided adversely to her then the suit goes on and Frye and others must come into court and give an accounting of their stewardship. If Mrs. Eddy is found to be strong mentally, "brilliantly sane," as Mayor Charles R. Corning of Concord and scores of others who have seen her declare, then the entire contention of the "next friends" is swept away. Such is the importance of the question which the masters must decide.

General Frank S. Streeter, who appears for Mrs. Eddy, personally echoed the confidence of the whole Christian Science world when he demanded that a speedy trial of the question of competency of Mrs. Eddy be granted, believing that the decision must be favorable to her.

In marked contrast to this was the admission of former Senator Chandler that practically their only evidence of record was that which is already on file and what has appeared in the newspapers.

"Ninety-nine per cent. of our evidence is in the hands of hostile witnesses," said John W. Kelley, one of Senator Chandler's associate counsel.

"The bill," said Judge Aldrich, "seems to be framed upon the description of Mrs. Eddy's methods of acquiring property, and the answers seem to proceed on the idea that the bill is not in good faith and for the protection of her interests, but in bad faith and for the purpose of dragging down the doctrine which she teaches and which she practices. But none of those questions seem to have been submitted to us. Neither does the matter of whether property is securely safeguarded seem to be submitted to us. The single question submitted is whether she was competent on the first day of March."

Masters' Statement.

At the conclusion of the day's hearing the master and co-masters made the following statement:

"We think Judge Chamberlain's order contemplates a speedy hearing of the issue submitted to us, but we also think that the order contemplates that a reasonable time should be accorded to the plaintiffs to prepare and obtain their evidence. In view of the fact that the questions pending before Judge Chamberlain were only determined last evening, we think it hardly reasonable to require the plaintiffs to proceed at once. We do not think the trial should be delayed for depositions in Concord in instances where they can attend the hearing personally. We do think that the plaintiffs should have reasonable opportunity to take depositions outside the jurisdiction, and in view of the statement of Mr. Streeter, that they will waive notice, we think that two weeks is sufficient for that purpose."

WILLIAMS MEN WARNED OF SWINDLERS

In the hope of preventing the swindling of Williams graduates who may attend the Old Home Week celebration, Chief Inspector Patrick J. Hurley, of the Cambridge Police Department, has asked the BOSTON AMERICAN to spread broadcast a warning against a pair of smooth swindlers, who he states have been working in this vicinity.

Mrs. Grace O. Scudder, of No. 17 Buckingham street, Cambridge, has reported that she lost $10 through the pair, they claiming that an uncle was a classmate of Mr. Scudder at Williams and that they had visited at the Scudder home as guests of Mr. Scudder.

To Mrs. Scudder they told a story of having come to Boston to meet an aunt, but had missed her. They were accompanied by their sister, they claimed, and she was at a Boston hotel. They showed tickets to Rochester, N. Y., but claimed they wished money enough to pay for berths on the train.

The men are said to be known as August Max, five feet six inches in height, with moustache, goatee, and a pronounced German accent, and Colgate B. Anderson, six feet in height, smooth face, slim and well-dressed. Both claim to be Williams graduates. They have in their possession a list of the alumni of the college in all parts of the country.

A general warning against the pair has been sent out from Ann Arbor, Mich., by Francis W. Kelsey, a Williams graduate, who is anxious for their apprehension.

CONDEMN TINY BOY TO DIE.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Italian detectives are searching the Italian quarter of Manhattan to-day for four-year-old Michael Calia, son of a Brooklyn barber, who is condemned by the Black Hand to die before dawn to-morrow because his father refused to pay $1,500 blackmail.

POLICE HUNT LOVE CHARMER

WORCESTER, July 27.—"Professor Cairo," a young man, who, according to the Worcester police, has posed in this city as a clairvoyant, with handsomely furnished apartments at No. 173 Main street, is no longer operating here as a trance medium and dispenser of love charms. The "Professor" was not at his offices to-day, and the police say no has left the city.

Several days ago a young Worcester girl called on Chief of Police David A. Matthews and complained that she had visited the "Professor" and given him $50 in several instalments. She declared that the alleged clairvoyant had promised to assist her in a love affair, claiming to possess marvelous power. When the "Professor's" love charm failed to work the girl went to the police.

JAPAN TO DISARM KOREAN TROOPS

SEOUL, July 27.—Japan intends to disarm the Korean army and to separate the former Emperor from his advisers and soldiers. The cabinet will accomplish this when sufficient Japanese troops shall have arrived to overawe resistance.

TAUNTS DELMAS ON THAW CASE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Delphin M. Delmas to-day made the closing argument in defence of Louis Glass, vice-president and general manager of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, charged with bribery.

Mr. Heney in his closing argument declared that Glass was the only man who had the power to authorize the $50,000 bribery disbursement at the time the bribes were paid. Mr. Heney exclaimed:

"When the time comes for me to die I would ten thousand times rather have built up a reputation for fighting the battles of the people for right and honesty and decency and justice than to have it said of me, with truthfulness, that I had crossed this great continent to taint great gifts in defence of a man who had shot down one of his fellow-men in cold blood in a public theatre."

BOGUS MARQUIS DUPED SOCIETY

NEW YORK, July 27.—A patron of big New York hotels, calling himself the Marquis de Compo Nuevo and claiming to be a scion of one of Spain's most distinguished families, has been arrested as a hotel beat and passer of worthless checks.

Nuevo is said to have swindled the Hotel Empire of this city and the Long Beach Hotel at Long Beach, L. I., out of money. It is declared by his captors that he has been dined and wined by gullible society folk. He is accused of hiring many automobiles and failing to pay for their use, and is reputed to have ingratiated himself into the favor of the families of General Bressler and Major Woodward while stopping at Long Beach.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

SISTERS OFFER HOME TO SAVE CLERK COUSINS

Heroic Salem Women Will Make Any Sacrifice to Keep Brother from Jail.

ARREST SURPRISES ALL

SALEM, July 27.—Determined to save their brother from prison, the Misses Elizabeth and Harriet Cousins, two highly respected women of this city, are willing to sacrifice their property to pay back the $4,510 Frank Cousins has confessed to have stolen from the Boston postoffice, where he was employed as clerk, and who was released on bail yesterday.

The sisters own their home at No. 335 Essex street in the exclusive part of the city and also their homestead on English street. They are willing to give all they have that their brother may be saved from jail. Such, at least, are their statements made exclusively to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

When the AMERICAN reporter called at their home a few hours after the arrest of their brother they were in ignorance of the grave charge hanging over him. When informed the truth they were nearly prostrated. Both declared their belief in his innocence and refused to believe he was guilty of any wrongdoing.

Will Sacrifice All.

"We will willingly dispose of all we have to help him, if it is true he is in such trouble. Oh, it is too bad, for he has always been such a loving brother to us. He has made himself poor by his deeds of charity, for he always had a dollar for those who asked him when in need.

"I knew that something was worrying him," said Miss Elizabeth, the older sister, "and last week I got together $100 for him. He told me that the magazine in which he has been interested was not paying him and that he was losing money in the venture.

This magazine was the Everyday Housekeeper, published by Clark & Clary, No. 70 Milk street, Boston. Both members refused to deny or affirm the postal clerk's connection with their publication.

"I can think of no other thing that has perhaps been responsible for Frank's wrongdoing," declared Miss Elizabeth, his sister. "He has spoken of this magazine several times and I knew that he was worrying over it. I do not believe he gambled in stocks or in other ways lived beyond his means. A more loving brother to sisters is not to be found. He has been very good to us always."

"I'd cut off my right arm, if necessary, to save him," declared the other sister. "The first we knew that anything was wrong with Frank was when a special delivery letter came from Boston addressed to us. It was from him and he told us he was in trouble and that he had sent for Mr. Goodell, our brother-in-law. He promised to be home by 6 o'clock."

Sole Topic of Discussion.

On every street corner in Salem to-day the arrest of Frank Cousins is discussed. That he had confessed to stealing the $4,510 from the postoffice made the news all the more amazing, for no man in Salem is better known than he. For years he was in the drygoods business in Salem, but following a fire and subsequent business depression he made an assignment.

Active among the workers of the Republican party, his friends advanced his name for the position of appraisership of the port of Boston. He was later appointed clerk in charge of the revenue stamps issued during the Spanish-American War. Later he was made a clerk in the Boston postoffice.

He never drank or smoked. His habits, say his legion of friends, were of the best. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and a long-time member of the Odd Fellows Lodge in Salem. He had no extravagant tastes. As a merchant and political worker his name was well known throughout Essex County. He was born in Salem fifty-seven years ago.

In his home city there is a great deal of sympathy being extended him and his friends will, it is said, make strenuous efforts to help him.

Lectured on Puritan Days.

He is a Grand Army man. Since giving up his business here Cousins has given numerous lectures on the Puritan days of his native city and other towns on the North Shore. His lectures were rarely productive on any income, as he gave them free of charge before various organizations, including the Y. M. C. A.

He was fond of photography and some of his pictures of historical places along the North Shore easily found their way into the magazines. His success in this line caused his interest in the Everyday Housekeeper magazine, according to his sisters. Later he was induced to invest ters. Later he was induced to invest money in the publication, so his sisters informed a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

TWO THEATRES OPEN TO-NIGHT

With the benefits of several stands between New York and Boston, and a rehearsal on the Globe stage this morning, Bonita and the "Wine, Woman and Song" Company open at that theatre to-night. This remarkable entertainment, which was for eight months at the Circle Theatre in New York and was one of the most talked of shows in New York, has been brought to the Globe intact by Manager Theise. The Globe engagement will be for the three weeks following. Matinees will be given on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday of each week.

The season at the Grand Opera House opens to-night with A. H. Woods's melodrama, entitled "Convict 999." This play is said to head the list of this season's crop of real "thrillers." Some of the more notable scenes are: The Waldorf-Astoria Hotel; the Eighth Regiment Armory on the night of the annual ball; the Criminal Court room; Sing Sing Prison; the ruined stone mill, and the wedding in the magnificent church. Captain Kelley's troupe of "Dare-Devil Zouaves," will appear in feats of wall-scaling and ladder-climbing in the "Prison-breaking" scene.

Fitchburg Pastor as Champion of Strikers

Rev. Archibald M'Cord a Big Factor in Contest of Machinists.

REV. ARCHIBALD M'CORD.

Special to the Boston American.

FITCHBURG, July 27.—Rev. Archibald McCord, acting pastor of the Rollstone Congregational Church, is an important factor in the strike of machinists, now in its third week.

Rev. Mr. McCord has spoken his position publicly from the pulpit. He has announced himself as in favor of the strikers. He says he believes they have as much right to organize and try to better their conditions as have their employers.

One of the deacons of Rollstone Church is Frederick Fosdick, head of the Fitchburg Machine Company, a concern whose employes are on strike. Mr. Fosdick is an influential member. As an employer it is said that he doesn't like the way the acting pastor has criticised the Metal Trades' Association for their refusal to treat with their employes.

Jeopardized Chance.

Recently Rev. W. O. Conrad resigned as pastor of the church. The resignation takes effect in September. It has been a foregone conclusion until the strike of machinists that Rev. Mr. McCord would be elected pastor. Now it is said to be a matter of doubt. Mr. Fosdick won't discuss his position.

"The minister who dares" does not recede from his position. He does not believe, however, that anyone could take offence to what he said. "You might as well object to Christianity itself," said Mr. McCord to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "Mr. Fosdick I believe to be a square man who means to do the right thing.

"However, I am not afraid of any man or cause when I preach the gospel. I have sympathy with these strikers because I believe in the equality of rights. I preach the 'square deal' and my people are in sympathy with me. There is the right of the union and the right of the Metal Trades' Association.

Preaches Golden Rule.

"I believe, and said so, that I thought the employers should have granted a conference with their employes. They wouldn't do it.

"Employers of labor should grant to laborers what they claim for themselves. Do unto others as they would have others do to them. This is my position and the platform I advocate."

Dr. McCord came to Fitchburg from Providence a year ago. He is a well-built, muscular-looking man, has the pose of an orator, and suggests a courage that will not give way before wealth and its influence.

"The Rollstone Church is of the people," he said. "The strikers need sympathy. The idea of a man leaving my church while I am preaching Christianity is absurd. My church stands by me in my principles.

"The whole community," he continued, "feel that this strike was brought about after careful and deliberate consideration on the part of the machinists, and my sermon was not antagonistic to any side, but expressed a view which a man in my position must maintain."

Does Not Fear Result.

"Do you not feel that your attitude will work against you in the church?" was asked.

"Not at all. As I have said before, the Rollstone Church is the church of the people and nobody can reasonably be offended at what was said. I have had numbers of people say a good word for the stand which I have taken."

"Haven't you anything to say about the outcome of the strike?"

"Not much except that the strike-breakers appear to be an inferior lot of men, and I regret this somewhat, because it has put this city in a state of agitation. All strikes more or less can be settled by arbitration, and the present one, it seems to me, could have been settled in this city long ago and need not be prolonged. I believe a settlement will be reached in a week or so."

Laughs at Rumor.

It was rumored that Frederick Fosdick of the Fitchburg Machine Company objected so much to Mr. McCord's sermons sympathizing with the strikers that he would not return to the church. The question was put to him. He leaned back in his chair and laughed.

"I know nothing about it," he said.

Then he was asked:

"What's the cause of the strike?"

"I don't know," he answered, "ask the men themselves."

On the support of Rev. Mr. McCord the strikers count much as evidence that the people of Fitchburg believe in them and do not countenance the bringing of strike-breakers who are not machinists into the city and housing them in a fine clubhouse, as well as carrying them to and from their work in automobiles.

It is maintained by the strikers that the strike would be settled and their demands granted were it not for one firm which has held out all along, and is keeping up the fight.

BRIGADE GOES TO CAMP TODAY

Today the first of the brigade camps was opened at the muster field, South Framingham, under command of Brigadier General Embury P. Clark. The brigade is made up of the Second and Sixth Infantry, and the signal corps has been assigned to duty with the brigade for this tour.

The three organizations rendezvous on the field at noon. The Second regiment, principally from the Western part of the State, arrived by special train, followed by the Sixth Infantry, with companies from Lowell, Fitchburg, Boston, Wakefield, Stoneham, Woburn, Concord, South Framingham, Milford and Marlboro.

All the commands will go into camp with full ranks and will have the assistance of Captain Robert C. Davis, Seventeenth Infantry, U. S. A., who has been assigned by the War Department as instructor. The brigade will remain in camp until Saturday.

DEATH DOOM STANDS.

GUATEMALA CITY, July 27.—The Supreme Court of Guatemala has confirmed the death penalty of all those sentenced in connection with the recent attempt to assassinate President Cabrera, and who had appealed their cases to the highest court.

1 DEAD, 6 HURT IN CAR CRASH

NEW YORK, July 27.—One man was killed and six others were injured when a Third avenue trolley car crashed into a truck to-day, and sweeping it aside, ran down a man and two horses.

Passengers in the car said the motorman was proceeding at a reckless speed, paying little attention to crossings.

SORE HANDS
Itching, Burning, Bleeding, Cured by Cuticura.

Soak the hands, on retiring, in a hot, thick lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment. Bandage lightly in old cotton or wear old gloves. This treatment is priceless for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough, and chapped hands, and for dry, itching palms and is equally effective for sore feet.

"WELCOME" TO THE PRISONERS OF CAMBRIDGE

Old Home Week Salute Greets Eyes of Passengers in Patrol Wagon.

PUT BIG SIGN OVER DOOR

Not the least entertaining of the Old Home Week decorations in Cambridge is a huge sign, "Welcome," over the doorway of the wagon house of Police Station 2 in Central square. This is where the drunks and other prisoners are driven when brought to the station house in the patrol wagon.

Proof of the signal success of this sign came immediately after its erection. Hardly was it up and welcoming one and all when the patrol dashed up with a prisoner charged with being excessively intoxicated.

Drivers Get Together.

It is Old Home Week in Cambridge as well as in Boston. In Central square are Police station 2, fire headquarters overhead, Chemical 1 house of the fire department adjoining and the wagon house in the rear of the station.

Police Chief Fred Pulen had police headquarters decorated with flags and bunting. Captain "Jim" Murray of police station 2 put on some decorations for the station.

Lieutenant Ed. Clark of Chemical 1 thought the fire house deserved ornament, so he joined the Old Home Week symposium.

All this time the humble wagon house in the rear of the police station was plain and unadorned. Then the four wagon drivers, John Cook, Fred McLaughlin, Warren Dow and Dennis Sullivan, with extra Driver John McCauley, got together.

"We'll decorate," they said.

So they ordered a sign eighteen feet long, bearing the word "Welcome," and some festoons of bunting for end pieces.

Gets First "Welcome."

The contrivance was being put up when a call came in for the patrol wagon. One of the drivers took the wagon out. Just as the "Welcome" sign was up, back came the wagon with Patrolman Arthur Blanchard and a prisoner.

The prisoner, charged with being intoxicated, surveyed the sign "Welcome" with startled glance. The wagon dashed under the sign and into the wagon house and the Old Home Week of the Cambridge "hurry up" department was officially on.

CHILD STOLEN WHEN INVALID FATHER SLEPT

DENVER, July 27.—In the shadow of death himself from a wasting disease, Thomas F. Aubrey of Boston is frantically hunting for his wife and daughter, Maud, who suddenly disappeared from Berkeley early on Tuesday. The father believes that his wife has taken the child, four years of age, with her. He has sued for divorce, but wants the child with him, she having been his constant companion.

Little Maud is heir to $100,000 by the will of her grandfather, Clarence Aubrey of Boston, a structural steel contractor. A telegram from him says he does not know where the child and wife are.

Maud strangely disappeared from her bed into which she had been tucked lovingly by her father, early Tuesday morning. Aubrey has lived with his wife and child in a tent near Lakeview, north of Berkeley, for nearly a year.

About two weeks ago Mrs. Aubrey told her husband she desired to go to Boston on a visit and asked him for $100, which he gave her. She wanted to take the child with her, but the father refused to be separated from both his wife and child at the same time and insisted that his daughter be left with him.

FOUR OFFICIAL CHANGES ON B. & M.

Four important changes on the Boston & Maine Railroad take place August 1.

G. H. Folger, superintendent of the terminal division, will be assistant general superintendent, a new office. The office vacated by Mr. Folger will be filled by G. L. R. French, assistant superintendent of the Connecticut & Passumpsic division, south of Windsor, with offices at Springfield. Mr. French's office will be filled by E. W. Ford, new assistant superintendent of the Connecticut & Passumpsic division, north of White River Junction. George W. Cree will occupy the office to be vacated by Mr. Ford.

POLICE CATCH HOME WEEK SPIRIT

Members of Cambridge department join in the work of the classic city by a display over the door of one of the patrol wagon houses. The work of putting up the word "Welcome" was interrupted by a call for the wagon and the unfortunate who was brought in was the first offender to gaze on the painted greeting.

WATTS PLANS ROUND-UP OF ARMENIAN PLOTTERS

SIX MEMBERS OF DEATH-DEALING HUNTCHAKIST BAND SOUGHT IN BOSTON.

Boston and New York police are discussing a plan to round up the members of the Armenian Terrorists' organization that was responsible for the murder of the millionaire rug merchant of New York and the sending of a death threat postal card to M. H. Gulesian of this city.

Facts relative to the existence of members of the band in this section of the country were given to Chief Watts by Mr. Gulesian. He declared that there are six members of the blackmailing band in this city, ten in New York, one in Providence and one in Chicago.

"If the police of these cities were to arrest these men the band of terrorists in this country would be blotted out of existence."

Additional clues have been found in New York, according to leased wire dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN, which will be of great assistance to the police in their investigation of the acts of the sinister band.

Priest Under Third Degree.

The clues were stumbled on during the examination of the Rev. Father Levont Martoogessian, the Armenian priest who admits he was at one time treasurer in America of the reform branch of the order of Huntchakists, an Armenian patriotic society. This reform branch is made up, according to members of the parent organization, of a band of blackmailers who do not hesitate at murder.

Father Martoogessian was put through the third degree by Assistant District-Attorney Smythe, yesterday. He professed to tell all he knew about both factions of the Huntchakists. He declared he was no longer a member of the order, because the members of the congregation objected to his belonging to it. He denied that there was any discrepancy in his accounts when he was in Fitchburg as treasurer of the reform branch, or that he had ever paid large sums of money to a man named Arzonian, who, it is suspected, knows much about the inner workings of the organization.

Shows Threat to Kill.

After his examination by Mr. Smythe, Martoogessian showed a letter written in Armenian and which he said contained a threat against his life. The envelope of the letter was postmarked Boston, July 22, the day Mr. Tavshanjian was killed. The priest did not produce the letter in the District Attorney's office. The writer, according to the priest, charged Martoogessian with the murder of Mr. Tavshanjian, and accused him of wanting to drink some "other prominent Armenian's blood."

Father Martoogessian is so scared, he says, that he intends asking for a police permit to carry a revolver. Friends of the priest, however, declare he has been in the habit of carrying a gun whenever he visited the rendezvous of the more desperate Armenians.

Confronted with Seals.

Father Martoogessian admitted he had been put through a severe cross-examination and had been forced to write his name in many ways and many times. He took a lawyer with him to the District-Attorney's office.

Two seals of the Huntchakists that appear on letters sent to victims were placed before Father Martoogessian. One of these is a plain egg-shaped affair and the other is oval and contains a hand grasping a dagger in threatening style. The priest said the latter belonged to what was known as Terrorists, but that he knew little about them. The other was the regular seal of the order.

Have Names of Leaders.

This statement was given out to-day at the office of the District Attorney in New York:

"We know the man who is at the head of the local department of the Hunchakist societies in this city and who we behind the plot that resulted in the murder of Hovannes S. Tavshanjian. We can get him any time. There is no danger of his getting away. When we want him he will be forthcoming."

The names of the members of the executive committee of the Hunchakists conducting the international affairs of the society from New York are in the hands of the District Attorney there.

A mass meeting of Armenians to consider ways and means of wiping out blackmailers will be held to-night at Murray Hill Lyceum.

"I EXPECT TO DIE," SAYS MAN WARNED BY BLACK HAND

EAST ORANGE, N. J., July 27.—"I expect to be killed. I am certain that all my efforts to evade the fate that has been fixed by the Huntkachists will be in vain, but I will sell my life dearly. I am ready for the men who have sent me this letter telling me that I am to die before August 3 unless I give them $10,000."

With two armed guards within call and a dangerous looking revolver close at hand, Armen P. Aleon, a wealthy Armenian rug merchant, looked as if he meant what he said.

Aleon has offices at No. 903-905 Broadway, New York. It is there that he was asked by the Armenian blackmailers to hand over the sum named by next Saturday or suffer death.

SHOEMEN DENY BRIBE BARGAIN

BROCKTON, July 27.—Stating that they welcome the most rigid investigation of their every act and are prepared to defend the same, Thomas B. Hickey of this city and Charles B. Murray of Lynn, who were declared elected general president and vice-president respectively by a majority of the inspectors of election in the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, emphatically deny the existence of any corrupt bargain with the majority of the inspectors.

They declare that a bargain was not necessary as they had a majority of over 800 votes after deducting all irregularities. They declare that the charges are trumped up for the purpose of influencing delegates at the coming convention, and to offset what they allege to have in store for the Tobin people.

GIRL CRAZED BY ATTACKS TRIES TO END LIFE

Escaping From Captors She Plunges Into Waters of New York Bay.

CRIME CARNIVAL GOES ON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The "crime wave" that has engulfed greater New York resulted in a beautiful girl becoming a raving maniac after having been kidnapped at North Beach, held a prisoner in the woods by nine ruffians for seven hours, and subjected to terrible cruelties.

About the same time a mob on Staten Island tried to break down a jail in order to lynch a man charged with having attacked a girl five years old.

Four other cases of attacks on girls within the last twenty-four hours were reported to the police.

The victim of the North Beach horror is Virginia Barish, a seventeen-year-old High School girl, who, after the attack by her captors, cast herself into the sea and then was taken to the county insane hospital stark mad and suffering from terrible injuries.

She was beaten black and blue. Her clothes torn from her and when she finally escaped it was to plunge into the waters of the bay in her frenzied efforts to get as far from her captors as possible.

Miss Barish resides with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barish, at No. 410 East Seventy-ninth street, Manhattan.

The girl's condition is such that it is feared she will not recover. Her terrible experience has completely unhinged her mind, and apart from her bodily sufferings, her mania is of such an acute form that the physicians believe she will not survive.

SPINNERS MAKE STRIKE THREAT

LOWELL, July 27.—The spinners in the Tremont and Suffolk cotton mills here who work nights have made a demand for an increase of 10 per cent. in wages, and if this is not granted they declare they will quit work on Monday.

The mills have been run at nights for several months in order to meet the demands of the trade, but the spinners have received no more pay for night work than those who work in the daytime. About 1[illegible] people will be affected at first.

BERLIN 'RIPPER' SLASHES THREE LITTLE GIRLS

Fiendish Murderer's Attack on Children Has German Capital in Terror.

NO CLUE TO CRIMINAL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BERLIN, July 27.—Every mother in Berlin is in terror to-day over a series of fiendish attacks on children and not a little one in the city has been allowed on the streets since yesterday afternoon.

A series of cold-blooded crimes, singularly resembling the "Jack the Ripper" murders, but for the fact that instead of women the victims were little girls, followed one another with remarkable celerity yesterday, almost in the centre of the city and aroused the most intense excitement and indignation.

Within a short space of time the assassin successively stabbed three girl babies, the oldest only five years old, slashing each several times in the abdomen with a sharp instrument. As a result one of the children is dead, another dying and the third is dangerously wounded.

Three Children Stabbed.

The first knowledge that the crime had been committed came when an ocupant of the house at the corner of Ryke and Belforter street found the body of Margaritha Prawitz, aged four, lying in a doorway bathed in blood.

This was immediately reported to the police, who were about to investigate when reports came that Bertha Lenst, aged three, and Elly Knispel, five years old, had been found similarly stabbed, but still alive, in Prinzlauer allee and Hensersdorfer street, respectively.

Inhabitants of the neighborhood became frantic. Mothers sought their children in the street and made them return indoors. Crowds gathered about the police station shouting vengeance against the murderer.

The officials acted quickly and published an offer of a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the slayer.

Suspect Arrested.

Shortly after the crimes were committed a slip of paper with a death head sketched on it was found on a public seat near the scene. On it was scribbled in a rambling hand: "Away, away; in five minutes there will be a corpse. There is a child murderer in the neighborhood. Deliver this note to the police. I have killed children in Belforter, Preinzlauer and Hensersdorfer streets."

A man was arrested shortly afterwards who tallied somewhat with the description of a man seen in the neighborhood shortly before the first murder. Later he aws confronted by the two wounded children, who however, were too weak to respond to the questions put to them.

The people then attempted to storm the station and the prisoner was removed to the Central station for security.

PUTS SMOKE NUISANCE UP TO GOVERNOR

Engineer Miles Says He Should Make Railroad Commission Enforce Law.

ACT GIVES THEM POWER

"Why petition the Board of Railroad Commissioners for a hearing on the abatement of the smoke nuisance during Old Home Week?" asks John E. Miles, locomotive engineer and author, who has been fighting for the enforcement of the smoke law.

"Petition the Governor and Council to summon the Railroad Commissioners before them," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "to show cause why they should not resign for failure to enforce the laws, which they have the power to do.

"If the Railroad Commissioners are anxious to obliterate the smoke nuisance, they have the authority, vested in them by the State, to do it now, without giving hearings, or even disucssing the matter," Mr. Miles declares.

Here is the law—section 6 of chapter 463 of the Acts of 1906—which Mr. Miles says puts the enforcement of the smoke law up to the commissioners:

"The board shall have the general supervision of all railroads and railways, and shall examine the same; and the commissioners shall keep themselves informed as to the condition of railroads and railways and the manner in which they are operated with reference to the security and accommodation of the public, and as to the compliance of the several railroad corporations and street railway companies with their charters and the laws of this Commonwealth. The board may from time to time require railroad corporations and street railway companies to install and maintain at such places upon the railroad or street railway premises as it shall designate such block or other signals or devices as it shall approve for the purpose of safeguarding public travel. The Supreme Judicial Court shall have jurisdiction in equity to enforce compliance with any order issued by the board under authority of this section.

DEATH DANCE HONORS DEAD INDIAN CHIEF

WALKER, Minn., July 27.—Flat Mouth, head chief of the Leech Lake band of pillagers, a branch of the Chippewa Indians, is dead at the agency here. Tribal customs of the Chippewas were carried out in full form. As soon as it was known that the head chief was about to leave for the happy hunting grounds the medicine dance was started and it continued for several days up to the time of Flat Mouth's death.

Monkey Guest at Belmont Luncheon Shocks Newport by Bad Table Manners

Trained Monkey Entertained by Society Leaders at Newport in His Finest Clothes.

Educated Brute, Though at Ease in Evening Garb, Shows Utter Disregard for Conventions of Society.

CONSUL THE FIRST, ARRANGED IN HIS EVENING CLOTHES.

Consul I. Throws Shoes Out of Window and Eats His Pate de Foie Gras Before Partaking of Soup Course.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 27.—Not since Harry Lehr gave his monkey dinner has Newport society been so wrought up over a member of the monkey tribe as by the advent of Consul I, a trained chimpanzee, the guest of honor, yesterday afternoon, of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, at Belcourt, their elegant Summer residence. Consul, the First, is Frank C. Bostock's talented and much-traveled ape. Consul's visit was in fulfillment of a promise which Mr. Bostock made some time ago to Elisha Dyer, son of the late Mayor Dyer of Providence, who was a close friend of the showman. Young Mr. Dyer and his wife are prominent members of the Summer colony here.

Consul arrived on the boat from Fall River, having come down to that city from Nantasket Beach, where he is summering.

Mr. and Mrs. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr and a few other cottagers were admitted to the select coterie. Luncheon was served in the bungalow adjoining Bellcourt, the distinguished guest keeping everybody on the qui vive with his odd mannerisms.

Consul created somewhat of a stir by partaking of the pate de fore gras before he negotiated the bouillon, and all present hastened to follow his example. He also wore his napkin on the top of his head, instead of about his neck, and this, too, was imitated conscientiously.

Then the scene changed to the drawing room. Consul took up his position in the southwest corner and received, being assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Belmont.

When that was over the guest established still another fad for Newport by taking off his shoes and throwing them out into the conservatory. Most of the company followed suit—some didn't. Consul was even going to do the same thing with his Prince Albert and tile, but Beck, his valet, presuaded him that this was almost too startling for Newport, and Consul desisted.

There was more music and there would have been dancing, but Consul begged to be excused on the ground that the swift round of soirees to which he had been subjected since arriving in New England had thoroughly exhausted him.

Before Consul paid his adieus and departed for Nantasket Mr. Belmont's secretary went downtown and bought him an entire outfit of clothing, even to yellow spats and a bamboo cane. Consul went away with nine invitations to come again.

MAGILLS TO BE RELEASED UNDER BAIL

New Witnesses Strengthen Prosecution in Strange Murder Case.

NOW SEEK FORTUNE TELLER

CLINTON, Ill., July 27.—In view of unusual circumstances surrounding the case and because several months must elapse before they can be called to trial, State's Attorney Miller is disposed to grant bail to Fred and Fay Graham Magill, charged with killing Magill's first wife, and they will probably be released under bail after their arrival to-night.

Sheriff Campbell's party left Pueblo last night. The route to Clinton is through Kansas City and St. Louis. Thus far on the trip their identity has been concealed from fellow passengers. Attorney Miller states that two new witnesses, just secured, strengthen the case of the prosecution.

An effort to learn to-day what the autopsy on the organs of Mrs. Pet Magill revealed met with failure. The report from Chicago physicians will not be here before Monday. Difficulty is experienced in securing a jury panel.

Authorities are seeking a fortune teller who is said to have predicted trouble for Fay Graham just before her marriage.

ONSET LIQUOR CRUSADE ON

Determined to rid Onset of the illegal sale of liquor, the Selectmen of Wareham have had recourse to an unusual and rare legal proceeding to attain their purpose.

They filed a bill in the Superior Court at Plymouth asking for injunctions restraining the defendants, Joseph A. Albertine, owner, Fred and Felix Bombard, occupants, of Beloit cottage; Philip Butler and Michael Riley, respectively owner and occupant of the Eagle Peak; Patrick Maguire and Nahum Pool, owner and occupant of the Highland Avenue House; Neil McLaughlin, owner and occupant of the Endicott Social Club; Patrick Donnelly and Hugh Smith, owner and occupant of the Avenue Hotel, from using the premises for the illegal sale of liquor. It was granted.

The defendants will be liable to imprisonment for contempt, from which there is no appeal if they violate the terms of the injunction.

"WIRELESS" OUTFITS FOR YANKEE TRAINS

German Engineer's New System May Be Adopted by American Railroad.

NEGOTIATIONS UNDER WAY

BERLIN, July 27.—American railway trains may soon be equipped wire wireless telegraphic outfits, enabling them to communicate with each other while flying at high speed, owing to the invention of a new system of wireless telegraphy by a German engineer named Heinicke.

Heinicke is said to be negotiating with one of the great American railway systems for the installation of his device, but the name of the company is kept secret.

Heinicke's method greatly simplifies the methods of sending wireless messages and makes the adoption of wireless to railway trains possible. The principal feature of his apparatus is its "tabloid" size. Both the transmitter and receiver can be packed in a case weighing twenty kilograms, and can easily be carried on a man's back. An entire wireless station outfit weighs only seventy kilograms and costs about $1,500. Messages can be sent by the apparatus over a radius of thirty miles.

The wireless system of Heinicke is also applicable for war purposes. It is believed it will prove especially useful for military scouting expeditions. Three men can transport a station any distance, and it can be set up, ready for use, in eight minutes.

81 POUNDS OF SUET IN LOIN

It's not a purple cow, but one that is looked upon as just as much of a freak among the market men because the suet in one loin weighs eighty-one pounds, while the average weight is twelve. This huge piece of suet has been placed on exhibition in the window at No. 83 North street, and great crowds of white aproned marketmen gather around offering theories as to the cause of the freak.

They have come to the conclusion, but it was simply a one-sided cow. The total weight of the loin is 117 pounds with thirty-six pounds meat and the rest suet. The other loin of this same cow weighed only fifty pounds.

Dorothy Dix Says, "Go Slow About Bragging and Boasting" in the Fifth of Her Ten Commandments for Summer Girls

There are women who could walk through an army of men and no man turn his head to look at them.—Dorothy Dix.

There are other women who cannot walk across a hotel gallery without every man getting up and following them.—Dorothy Dix.

BY DOROTHY DIX

THE fifth commandment of the Summer girl is this:

Boast not of the splendor of thy home, nor of the number of thy man servants and thy maid servants, nor of the millionaires who wished to marry thee, for behold thy price tag is written upon thy forehead so that the woman who runs may read, and she will know thee for what thou art.

It is a sad admission, but it is to be feared that, if the snap judgment that was executed upon Sapphira should be meted out to all the ladies who are confiding to their neighbors at Summer resorts what they have at home and the exalted position in society that they occupy in their own cities, there wouldn't be enough young men present to carry out the dead, and the Summer hotels would be depopulated.

Just why the Summer season should mark a decadence in feminine morals and mates no philosopher has yet been able to explain. It is merely a fact, and it is beyond dispute that women who at home scorn either to lie or to brag no sooner breathe the contaminating air of a Summer resort than they begin to draw a long bow when they tell of the splendors and gayety they have left behind them.

A small flat becomes in the relating a gorgeous apartment. A modest cottage blooms into a residence with drawing rooms, and breakfast rooms, and billiard rooms, and music rooms.

An occasional three course dinner to a few friends is pathetically referred to as the burden of entertaining. A hired girl is miraculously multiplied into maids, and a small black yard boy or a surly Irish janitor is metamorphosed in speech into a butler.

Nay, more, I have even heard plainly dressed women tell, with every appearance of candor, that the reason they wore cottons and taffeta silk was because they came to rest and left all their Paris clothes at home, and I have listened with bulging eyes while they discoursed upon the gorgeousness of their diamonds that they locked up in a safety deposit vault lest peradventure they might be stolen in a Summer hotel.

Bad Form to Lie

IT is always bad form to lie, daughter, especially where you will be found out, and it is a mere waste of time to tell other women such tarradiddles as these.

In the things that concerns her real interest, such as dress and social position, every woman is a Sherlock Holmes in petticoats, and the most innocent, the most credulous and unsophisticated-looking lady alive can give one look at a sister woman and size up to a hair's breadth what kind of a home she comes from, what sort of awnings she walks under, and what she is worth.

Of course, there really are women who do not care anything about clothes and who prefer walking to riding in an automobile, but these have the earmarks of their sincerity sticking out so far that nobody can miss them.

They don't wear nearsilk and imitation jewelry and hint for a seat in other people's motor cars.

Therefore, since you will deceive nobody anyway by pretending to be what you are not, frankness is the best policy. It disarms criticism and, in addition to tell the truth and lack pretension is so unusual in a girl that it gives her a certain cachet of itself.

If you are a working girl out for a holiday don't be ashamed to admit it, and don't, for pity's sake, represent yourself as a blase society girl.

Don't be silly enough to talk about your box at the opera, or the horse show, or speak of your intimacy with millionaires that you only know from seeing their names and pictures in the newspapers.

Respect for This Girl

EVERYBODY who is worth knowing has a wholesome respect for the girl who has the intelligence and the independence to get out and make her living herself instead of burdening down a poor old father or mother, or sucking the life blood, like a leech, from a brother.

They have also a sympathy, that has nothing of pity in it, for these little heroines of society, and there are few people so mean that they are not willing and anxious to stretch out a hand toward this kind of girl and help her to have a good time.

Also the working girl brings a fresh point of view with her, and people like her and seek her society if she is unashamed of what she does, because she can tell them funny and piquant little stories of a side of life of which they know nothing. The most interesting cobbler last is she who sticks closest to her last.

If, on the other hand, you really are what we call a society girl, still go slow in boasting of your position and of the admiration that you receive at home.

Your clothes will give a fairly good index to the size of your pocketbook, and if you are one of those women who charm men you will not have left your power to conjure behind you. The magnet draws the needle as well in the mountain or at the seashore as it does in a stone mansion in New York or Chicago or San Francisco.

Men Follow Some Women

THERE are women who could walk through an army of men and no man turn his head to look at them. There are other women who cannot walk across a hotel gallery without every man getting up and following them.

If you are a belle at home the doty grandpas and the callow kidlets at the Summer hotel will attest the validity of your claim, and if they don't it is folly for you to sit against the wall and at the hops at a Summer hotel, or take mountain walks with another girl, and relate how at home the men struggled for places on your dance programs and you had to go to a rest cure after the rush of the season.

Besides, bragging is always bad form and shows a lack of self-confidence. It is the bluff that failure puts up to hide behind.

If men admire you and suitors are standing in line waiting their turn to importune you to marry them you have no need to advertise the fact. If you are one of the passed-overs, it is best not to call attention to your misfortune.

Therefore, daughter, go slow about bragging and boasting. Thus shall you keep off of other people's toes and achieve safety. Also you will become conspicuous because you will have no rivals.

FIRST FOUR COMMANDMENTS

1st. WHEN thou travelest, be not as the provincials are, for they are like unto the swine who hog it all, and their name is an abomination and a hissing in all men's mouths.

2nd. BEAR in mind that thou art not the only pebble on the beach, and that the Summer hotel is not run for thy exclusive behoof and benefit. So shall the sick and the halt and the sleepless arise and bless thy name.

3rd. CONSIDER thy raiment, yet put not all thy trust in clothes, for, lo, the race is not always to the fashion plate, nor the victory to the milliner's model.

4th. TAKE heed to thyself, and consider well what thou mayest do and what thou shouldst refrain from doing. Be not of those foolish fat virgins who sit in hammocks, nor of the bony ones who go in swimming.

One Kind of Poison That's Sure to Kill All Joy in the Home

By Winifred Black

WINIFRED BLACK

HURRAH, my cook's gone!

She was the best cook I ever had in my house. Her spuds were a dream, her salads were a poem, her meats were epics, and her desserts were nectar and ambrosia.

She was neat as wax, as regular as a clock, as prompt as a Chinaman, as reliable as a German—and as cross as two sticks.

Everything that she cooked tasted so good that you wanted a second helping of it, but every time you remembered her face you began to hurry to get through dinner so as to escape the chance of a glimpse of that frown.

She had a strange way of listening at doors, did that cook, and of appearing suddenly in passageways when two of the family were trying to tell each other family secrets.

Sly Hatred

SHE was respectful, and she never spoke one word that she shouldn't have spoken. But, oh, the sly hatred of those catlike eyes of hers, and oh, the envious disdain of her looks!

I'd rather eat a burned chop and a leaf of lettuce for my dinner and have it served by a rosy, smiling maid than to partake of the finest dinner in the world served by a cook who looks as if she'd poison you if she only dared.

She did poison all of us.

Before she had been with us a week we were all blue and down in the mouth, and discouraged and discontented. Nobody knew what was the matter. But the fact was, and is, and always will be, that one evil-minded human being can poison the whole atmosphere of a house just as effectually as a murderer can poison a bowl of soup.

I would almost as soon live in the house with a poor wretch with a mania for setting things afire or for turning on the gas in the bedrooms at night as I would to live my life under the same roof with a person of evil, envious and discontented mind.

The Difference

PAY no attention to such a person! Why, you might just as well say, "Pay no attention to a microbe; your lack of attention doesn't hurt the microbe any; he can keep right on working just the same."

My new cook is only an ordinary person, she could never win the cordon bleu by any of her works, but she's cheery and rosy, and happy and contented—and I can breathe without fear of taking poison, the dreadful poison of a distempered mind, into my very system.

What to Do When Baby Is Vaccinated

SOME mothers are apt to think vaccinating baby is a very cruel practice, instead of one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for the good of mankind.

It is quite rare nowadays to see people badly scarred, and even blinded, from smallpox, but before vaccination it was a most common sight, and this dreadful disease literally killed thousands in this country.

If an unvaccinated baby under a year old caught smallpox it would be almost a miracle if it did not die; whereas, if vaccinated, and smallpox broke out in the neighborhood, it is most unlikely he would take it, and if he did, would have it so mildly that probably his life would never be endangerd, nor a mark left. Babies are usually vaccinated at about the age of three months, sometimes under, especially if there has been any case of smallpox near.

The age is important, as if it is done too young it is apt to upset baby's digestion at a very critical stage. On the other hand, if much older, he is more likely to rub the little sore, red marks with his fingers and perhaps rub dust or dirt into them. This often causes eczema and breaking-out all over his body, for which the vaccination is blamed instead of the little, dirty, sticky fingers.

Be Sure He's Well

Mind, do not have baby vaccinated if from any cause he is not well; it is then no use taking him to the doctor to see about it, because he will only tell you to leave it until the child is himself again, unless, of course, there is smallpox about.

Also, it should not be done if there is any infectious illness in the house, particularly erysipelas, or even if much in the neighborhood, such as measles, scarlet fever, etc.

Of course you must expect baby to be a little cross and even feverish after vaccination; generally these symptoms may be noticed about the fourth or fifth day after his arm has been done.

Probably the child will be restless at night and his digestion somewhat upset. He is sure to be thirsty, so remember a little cold boiled water will do him good; but do not give him too much.

Don't Get Worried

Inexperienced mothers are sometimes very anxious when the little arm becomes hot, swollen and red for an inch or two all around the marks, and if any of the glands in the neck or armpits swell, so that lumps can be seen or felt; or should baby develop a rash, they think the outlook very black indeed.

But none of these need really worry you; very few children escape all of them, and these will vanish again in four or five days. Should, however, the infant seem really ill, ask a doctor to see it at once, but on no account give it any medicine yourself during the vaccination period.

All that can be done to cool the arm round the marks is not to take off the doctor's bandage, but to brush a little boracic ointment very gently round it, where the arm is inflamed, with a soft paint-brush or a clean feather.

Try to avoid the bandage put on by the doctor being rubbed off. The little blisters are soon broken, and this will sometimes render the vaccination less effectual. The cheap "shields" sold do often much more harm than good. Be sure baby's upper and under sleeves are very soft and large; draw them off and on very gently, and be most careful that the sore arm does not get knocked, as it would cause great pain, and probably break the blisters.

Do not attempt to remove the scabs left after the marks are healed. They will soon come off themselves, and if pulled off will cause much soreness.

A word in conclusion—remember, after about seven years it is necessary to have children revaccinated, the same as adults; this point some mothers forget.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

MAGNESIA is one of the best ways known of forestalling sunburn before going on the water. Rubbing a cake of it on the face until the skin is well covered with the white powder is excellent, always provided that one does not mind looking like a newly arisen ghost.

Always powder the face well before going out, and wear, whenever possible, a double chiffon veil, which will offset the action of the sun. Let its color be gray, blue or green, as these shades draw the sun's rays much less than do, for instance, red or orange, and white should be preferred to black.

An old-fashioned preventive, but a good one, is to wash the face in buttermilk before essaying a trip in the open air. Use the buttermilk just as you would water, pouring a sufficient quantity into a basin and laving the face well. Let it dry on the skin and then powder.

ICE CREAM AND POP CORN

DEAR PROFESSOR:

If a person is dieting on account of pimples would the eating of ice cream or pop corn cause the face to grow worse.

JACK.

THE state of the stomach governs the pimples and the eating of ice cream in moderation will not harm the stomach unless eaten too cold. Anything that chills the stomach and reduces the temperature too low interferes with the digestion of the thing eaten and thus causes trouble. Eat it in small quantities and let it melt in the mouth before swallowing it instead of gulping down a frozen mass as many do. Pop corn is, as a rule, indigestible, as it usually is swallowed without the proper amount of mastication and is, therefore, not mixed with the right amount of saliva, which turns its indigestible starch into sugar so the stomach juices can act upon it. So it is well to eat sparingly of pop corn and masticate extremely well what you do eat.

TO MAKE HAIR WAVY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Some time ago you printed a formula for making the hair wavy. I have mislaid my copy and would ask you kindly to repeat it. Also can you tell me of anything that will make the hair a little coarser, as mine is very fine?

H. K. L.

THE following formula is the one you refer to, I think: Potassium carbonate, 120 grains; ammonia water, one fluid dram; alcohol, 12 fluid drams; rose water, enough to make 16 fluid ounces. Moisten the hair with this, arrange loosely and it will curl upon drying, although nothing can make it coarser without injuring it.

(Will S. D. V., Helpless and I. N. please note answer to H. K. L., as it answers the question asked by all of them!)

FALLING HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me if shaving off my hair will stop it from falling out. I have tried many remedies but without success. Also tell me a speedy remedy for bad breath.

JOHN M.

SHAVING the head may help in so much as it will reduce the amount of nourishment needed for longer hair and thus give the hair cells a chance to recuperate and better assimilate a tonic. First see to your general health, as nothing more quickly reflects bad health than the hair. If you are in good condition a liberal and constant use of vaseline massaged into the scalp every night ought to soon renew life to the roots of your hair. Use only a little vaseline, but see that it is rubbed well, but gently, until all is absorbed. You can remove any that is left on the scalp by wiping it with a cloth wet in alcohol or cologne, thus preventing the soiling of the pillow. Once or twice a month, as the hair is growing out, rub coal oil into the scalp and wash off in the morning. For bad breath look to the condition of your stomach. It is likely that the same conditions produce the bad breath and cause the falling hair. If the teeth are not decayed the odor is sure to come from the stomach and a doctor should dictate treatment. However, charcoal tablets will help, as also will soda water.

KEEP SHORT HAIR UP

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Please give me some advice as to keeping the short hair on my neck up. I wear my hair high and the short hairs straggle all about my neck.

X. Y. Z.

THE simplest way is to wear one of the numerous devices for this purpose that are on the market. Barettes, as they are just now the mode, will answer the purpose and look well. In the meantime, don't curl the hair and allow it to grow out longer.

What's This? Milk Not Good for Cats?

TO most people it will be startling to hear that cats should not have milk.

It is not a natural, save in the beginning, food for them, nor a desirable one.

Meat for food and water for drink is the latest approved cat diet.

Be sure and keep water about; many a cat goes thirsty.

Nor even is it best to give kittens milk. As soon as they are through nursing give them meat at once; don't wean them with milk.

At eight weeks the desirable food is raw meat chopped fine. Beef is perhaps the best sort if one is going into the thing scientifically, so to speak, though there is no harm in general table scraps where there is not too much grease with them.

The best vegetable (for the diet should not consist wholly of meat) is rice. This, cooked not too soft, and mixed with finely chopped raw meat, and given them twice a day, has been found by a successful cat culturist to be the most satisfactory and healthful diet.

Unlike dogs, they really do not need regular washing, though it is quite possible to train a cat to a weekly bath if she is taken early enough.

BEST WAY TO WASH A PLUME

WHITE plumes which have done duty on old hats should undergo a certain amount of renovation. One of the best methods of cleaning them is to place them first of all in a basinful of soapsuds made with cold water instead of hot, and in in which they should be left to steep for an hour or two.

They should then be removed, plunged into boiling water and allowed to remain in it at least a quarter of an hour. Each feather should then be taken out, spread on the cloth and every particle of dirt which may still cling to the fronds removed by rubbing these with a soft piece of silk dipped in soapsuds. They must then be rinsed in several changes of hot water and finally laid on a towel across the knee, the fronds being then dabbed gently with a towel made into a ball, the object being to regain the curved shape of the feather before it is returned to the hat.

When almost dry the feathers should be well shaken until they appear perfectly soft and fluffy, when they should be immediately inclosed in tissue paper and placed in a cool oven or on the plate-rack of the stove, so as to complete drying operations.

To curl the feathers no tool is more effective than an ivory paper knife. Each frond should be picked up separately, and with a sharp but gentle turn of the wrist given the requisite curl, this being continued until the plume has regained its original appearance.

The Boston American Pattern

A Stylish Little Over-Dress

5820

NO. 5,820—The over-dresses that are so popular for children this season are as simple and practical as they are becoming. This one is made with low, round neck, and is suitable for wear with a variety of guimpes. Prettily shaped shoulder caps extend over the arm hole, lending width to the figure and adding greatly to the style of the little garment. The full straight skirt is tucked above a deep hem, and is gathered and attached to the waist. Challis, henrietta, pongee, linen and gingham are all suggested for the making. For a child of 8 years 2½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

No. 5,820—Sizes for 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents, with size, name and address, to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

"YOU are very good, uncle," Mary said, gratefully. "And you must remember it isn't as though I were leaving you alone. You have the girls."

Mr. Bullsom nodded.

A Problem

"Yes," he said, "I have the girls. Look here, Mary," he added, suddenly, looking her in the face, "I want to have a word with you. I'm going to talk plainly. Be honest with me."

"Of course," she murmured.

"It's about the girls. It's a hard thing to say, but somehow—I'm a bit disappointed with them."

She looked at him in something like amazement.

"Yes, disappointed," he continued. "That's the word. I'm an uneducated man myself—any fool can see that—but I did all I could to have them girls different. They've been to the best school in Medchester, and they've been abroad. They've had masters in most everything, and I've had 'em taught riding and driving, and all that sort of thing, properly. Then as they grew up I built this house and came up to live here amongst the people whom I reckoned my girls'd be sure to get to know. And the whole thing's a damned failure, Mary. That's the long and short of it."

"Perhaps—a little later on——" Mary began hesitatingly.

"Don't interrupt me," he said, brusquely. "This is the first honest talk I've ever had about it, and it's doing me good. The girl's like to put it down to your mother and me, but I don't believe it. I'm ashamed to say it, but I'm afraid it's the girls themselves. There's something not right about them, but I'm blessed if I know what it is. Their mother and I are a bit vulgar, I know, but I've done my best to copy those who know how to behave—and I believe we'd get through for what we are anywhere without giving offence. But my girls oughtn't to be vulgar. It's education as does away with that, and I've filled 'em chock-full of education from the time they were babies. It's run out of them, Mary, like the sands through an hour-glass. They can speak correctly, and I dare say they know all the small society tricks.

"But that isn't everything. They don't know how to dress. They can spend just as much as they like, and then you can come into the room in a black gown as you made yourself, and you look a lady, and they don't. That's the long and short of it. The only decent people who come to this house are your friends, and they come to see you. There's young Brooks, now. I've no son, Mary, and I'm fond of young men. I never knew one I liked as I like him. My daughters are old enough to be married, and I'd give fifty thousand pounds to have him for a son-in-law. And, of course, he won't look at 'em. He sees it. He'll talk to you. He takes no more notice of them than is civil. They fuss round him, and all that, but they might save themselves the pains. It's hard lines, Mary. I'm making money as no one knows on. I could live at Eaton and afford it.

Advice

"But what's the good of it? If people don't care to know us here, they don't anywhere. Mary, how was it education didn't work with them girls? Your mother was my own sister, and she married a gentleman. He was a blackguard; but, hang it, Mary, if I were you I'd sooner be penniless and as you are than be my daughters with five thousand apiece."

There was an embarrassed silence. Then Mary faced the situation boldly.

"Uncle," she said, "you are asking my advice. Is that it?"

"If there's any advice you can give, for God's sake let's have it. But I don't know as you can make black white."

"Selina and Louise are good girls enough," she said, "but they are a little spoilt, and they are a little limited in their ideas. A town like this often has that effect. Take them abroad, uncle, for a year, or, better still, if you can find the right person, get a companion for them—a lady—and let her live in the house."

"That's sound!" he answered. "I'll do it."

"And about their clothes, uncle? Take them up to London, go to one of the best places, and leave the people to make their things. Don't let them interfere. Down here they've got to choose for themselves. They wouldn't care about taking advice here, but in London they'd probably be content to have it. Take them up to town for a fortnight. Stay at one of the best hotels, the Berkeley or the Carlton, and let them see plenty of nice people. And don't be discouraged, uncle."

"Where the devil did you get your common sense from?" he inquired, fiercely. "Your mother hadn't got it, and I'll swear your father hadn't."

She laughed heartily.

"Above all, be firm with them, uncle," she said. "Put your foot down and stick to it. They'll obey you."

"Obey me?" Good Lord, I'll make 'em," Mr. Bullsom declared, vigorously. "Mary, you're a brick. I feel quite cheerful. And, remember this, my girl. I shall make you an allowance, but that's nothing. Come to me when you want a bit extra, and if ever the young man turns up, then I've got a word or two to say. Mind, I shall only be giving you your own. My will's signed and sealed."

She kissed him fondly.

"You're a good sort, uncle," she said. "And now will you tell me what you think of this letter?"

"Read it to me dear," he said. "My eyes aren't what they were."

She obeyed him.

"41 Bucklesbury, London, E. C.

"Dear Madam—We have received a communication from our agents at Montreal, asking us to ascertain the whereabouts of Miss Mary Scott, daughter of Richard Scott, at one time a resident in that city.

"We believe that you are the young lady in question, and if you will do us the favor of calling at the above address, we may be able to give you some information much to your advantage. We are dear madam, yours respectfully,

JONES & LLOYD."

Mr. Bullsom stroked his chin thoughtfully.

"Sounds all right," he remarked. "Of course you'll go. But I always understood that your father's relations were as poor as church mice."

Send in Your Best Preserving Recipe

FOR the next few weeks the Economy Editor wants to publish the choicest recipes of New England housewives for jellies, preserves, catsups, sauces and pickles.

Of course you have some Winter goody for which you are famous. This is what the BOSTON AMERICAN wants. Share the secret with your neighbors by writing it out and mailing it to Economy Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street.

When your recipe is printed on this page you receive free a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN Economy Cook Book, a substantial indexed blank-book of 120 pages, bound in heavy oil-cloth, especially designed to preserve these recipe gems in permanent form.

SWEET PICKLE

ONE peck green tomatoes, sliced; sprinkle each layer with salt and let stand over night. Drain and add five pounds brown sugar, one tablespoon mace, one tablespoon whole cloves, one tablespoon mustard seed, six large pickled limes, chopped fine; cover with vinegar and cook until soft.

ELSIE G. WOOD.

No. 30 Bowers stret, Newtonville.

CUCUMBER PICKLES

WASH the cucumbers clean and lay them in a crock or jar. Dissolve fine cooking salt in boiling water, make it quite strong and pour over the cucumbers while hot. Cover and let stand twenty-four hours. Then pour off this brine, put the cucumbers in your pickle jar with layers of pickling spice between, and pour over them enough vinegar, brought to a boil, to cover. They will be ready to eat in a few days, are always firm and crisp, and will keep good two years. This receipt was used by my grandmother, aged ninety-three.

SWEDISH ROLLS

SEVEN cups of flour, one pint of milk (boiled). When cool add one-half cup butter, one-quarter cup sugar, one egg, one yeast cake. For tea, set them to rise at 8 a. m. At 3 p. m. roll out about an inch thick (cut with biscuit cutter), put small piece of butter on one side and fold them in halves. Put in pan a little apart and let rise till time to bake for tea.

MRS. LOUIS F. TAPLEY.

Bucksport, Me.

WASHINGTON PIE

FOUR eggs well beaten, one cup sugar, one heaping cup bread flour sifted with one teaspoon of cream tartar, one-half teaspoon of soda dissolved in one tablespoon of cold water; beat up lightly and bake on four round tins in hot oven. This makes two pies.

FILLING

Have one pint milk heating in spider and stir in the following ingredients well mixed: Two beaten eggs, six tablespoons sugar, two tablespoons flour. Cook carefully until done and spread immediately on the hot cake. This is very nice with cocoanut sprinkled on before putting on upper cake; whip cream for top, or sift on powdered sugar.

MRS. LOIS E. VOSE.

No. 100 Mechanic street, Fitchburg. Box No. 62.

FINE CHOCOLATE CAKE

ONE-HALF cup of butter, one and one-half cups of sugar, two eggs; melt one-quarter of a pound of chocolate and use three tablespoons in the cake (saving the rest for the icing), one teaspoon of vanilla and one cup of sweet milk; use two generous cups of flour with one teaspoon of saleratus sifted through it.

For the icing use the remainder of the melted chocolate, one and one-half cups of sugar, one teaspoon of butter, one-half cup of milk and one teaspoon of vanilla. Bake this cake in a medium-sized dripping pan, as it makes a large cake.

Madame Cecil and Her Leopards.

Victor, the Patriarch Lion.

Jaguar-Leopard.

Fearless Women Trainers Daily Defy Death from Attacks of Savage Jungle Pets.

"G-r-r-r, b-r-r-r," growls Victor, one of the big lions in the Bostock Animal Arena at Paragon Park. "Gr-r-r-r, I'm safe for anybody to handle; O, yes, I'm full of 'dope'. I can't scratch or bite!"

Thus says Victor, with a snarling grin on his feline features. He is a humorist. Victor is a bit afraid of Madame Dorcy, his trainer. But that's about all.

If there's any nature fakir in existence who wearies the soul of the professional animal trainer it's the one who goes around saying:

"Huh, I could train those animals myself. I'd like to go into the cage. Only the management won't let you. It's no great shakes to handle them lions, tigers and pumas. They only growl. They won't really bite."

You ought to hear Manager McField Cecil of the Bostock Arena at Paragon Park relieve his mind concerning these outside critics.

Ask Madame Ora Cecil, the leopard and puma trainer, to show you the livid scars on her slender wrists. Ask Madame Dorcy, the lion trainer, if there's any danger at all in handling the big cats.

Here are pictures of Victor, one of the lions, of some of the leopards and of a combination beast, half leopard, half jaguar, which form part of the Bostock collection.

Notice the absolutely harmless expression on the lion's face. He has his paw out. See the muscular wrist. Wouldn't you like to slap the lion on the wrist?

Did you ever torment your house cat till she flattened back her ears, opened her mouth and hissed and snarled at you? And you thought it was comical.

Notice the comical appearance of the jaguar-leopard in the picture. It would be comical to go up and pet him on the head when he looks this way. It would be simply ridiculous in more senses than one.

Madame Cecil, the Lady of the Leopards, as she is known, sums up the big cat proposition this way:

"You can train them, some. You can mingle with them a little if they know you; know you are not afraid of them and know they must obey. But they are always uncertain. Sometimes you can handle them. Sometimes you can't. The pumas and leopards are nervous and fidgety. You can't tell when they will bite or scratch. I never had but one leopard who showed any sign of real tractability.

"For strangers these animals are an absolute peril. I have let outsiders inside the cage, but only at rare intervals and only when I was in the cage too. And then I am uneasy. The presence of a stranger excites all the animals' suspicion ten-fold. It is dangerous for the outsider and thus more dangerous for me."

If you don't believe these animals are wild ones and are dangerous at their best, then go to Paragon Park and see them for yourself.

An unusual opportunity to see them free of charge is offered now by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, which prints to-morrow two tickets, free to all purchasers of the paper. One of these tickets admits you free to Paragon Park. The other ticket admits you free to Bostock's Animal Arena in Paragon Park. These two admissions are worth a total of thirty-five cents. Previously the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN tickets for this combination required you to give ten cents also for your admission to the Bostock show. You get both park and Bostock show free. The tickets are good Monday or Tuesday, July 29 or 30, afternoon or evening.

COURT STOPS REALTY CRASH FORECLOSURES

One Providence Home Builder Charges Juggling of Mortgage Deeds.

THREE COMPANIES ALLIED

PROVIDENCE, July 27.—An order was served today upon the officers of the Home Realty Company, the People's Trust Company and the Central Trust Company, temporarily restraining them from foreclosing or negotiating mortgages given by Guistino Tortolani of this city, upon property in Federal street, to the People's Trust Company. These mortgages, dated March 26, were for $5,500 and $1,800. At the same time, Tortolani says, he contracted with the Home Realty Company to have the latter build a house on the lot, and it was agreed that the money raised by the mortgages, $7,300 in all, should be used for the construction.

The bill filed in the Superior Court, declares, however, that only $3,000 was expended and that the first mortgage was transferred and assigned to the Central Trust Company and the second is among the documents belonging to the Home Realty Company now in the hands of the assignee, Edwin O. Chase.

The bill alleges further that the various corporations mentioned are controlled and managed by the same business heads, and that they occupy a close private and financial relation to one another.

This is the first move of a new plan to discover the real relationship between these various companies and promises interesting results.

TWO POLITICAL FAKIRS SCARE PEDDLER'S NAG

Azelina Kicks at Curb Discourse on City Hall Honesty and G. O. P.'s.

Abraham Rosenberg, a pedler of country produce, thirty-eight years old, residing at No. 85 Cambridge street, Cambridge, is at the Massachusetts General Hospital with a bad right eye, a lame right knee and a bruised nose, all because two West Enders, unidentified, insisted on talking politics today within earshot of the Rosenberg horse, Azelina.

The two men stood almost at the horse's head in Eaton street. Rosenberg, heedless of them, leaned far back over the seat to talk cabbages and potatoes to Mrs. Sarah Epstein and Mrs. Molly O'Donnell.

"It's a shame to say that politicians are selling sites on Boston Common for Old Home Week privileges," said one of the men.

"Never was a City Hall administration so honest," said the other.

Azelina made a vicious kick. "Whoa!" cried Rosenberg.

"The Republican party is a friend to the working man," said the first speaker.

"And the Democratic party also," said the other, "because the Democratic party and the Republican party are the best of friends."

"Senator Crane loves Boss Lodge, too."

"The common people are getting the best of everything."

* * *

A building in North Russell street stopped Azelina. Rosenberg was thrown against the building over Azelina's head. He was sent off to the Massachusetts General, while kind-hearted policemen from Joy street took Azelina away to a barn and removed the wagon in a basket.

N. B.—There's no reason why Old Home Week visitors now here shouldn't get some of this hidden treasure. It would be a fine souvenir.

STEALS BRIDE FROM PARENTS ON THE STREET

FALL RIVER, July 27.—Stealing his sweetheart away from irate parents who had forbidden her to wed, Simios Augusto, a young Syrian spinner, became the proud husband here of pretty Teresa Moniz, a nineteen-year-old Portuguese spinning girl of No. 261 Lindsey street.

Augusto had lover's troubles in plenty before leading the fair Teresa to the altar. Their troth had been plighted for a year, but Teresa's parents objected. Learning Wednesday that the young man had taken out a marriage license, they locked the girl in her room.

Augusto, with a deputy sheriff and a constable, appeared at the Moniz home and demanded the girl's freedom. Not only were the lover and his official companions repulsed, but the locks on the girl's door were strengthened, and the girl, she alleges, was chastized in parental fashion by her father.

In some way the persistent lover managed to smuggle a note to his sweetheart and an elopement was planned. Yesterday, as was their custom, the parents were accompanying the girl to her work when a hack was driven rapidly up from behind. Augusto caught the girl in his arms and she quickly and willingly accompanied him to the hack. The way was taken to St. Michael's Church, and before the astounded parents could reach there on foot, Miss Moniz had become Mrs. Augusto. They are on a honeymoon, where, the outwitted parents do not know.

SALVADOR TO LAY TROUBLES BEFORE MEXICO

WASHINGTON, July 27.—It is probable that President Diaz of Mexico will either act as arbitrator himself or will appoint a court of arbitration to settle the dispute which has arisen between Salvador and Nicaragua, through the attack upon the port of Acajutla, belonging to the former country, by a party of filibusters conveyed in the Nicaraguan gunboat Momotombo. Salvador has demanded reparation.

After rejecting the proposition of the Nicaraguan minister to Mexico that the dispute should be submitted to arbitration the Salvadorian government, it is now announced, will herself lay the matter before President Diaz. If he should propose arbitration Salvador can more gracefully accept the suggestion.

YANKEE WINS $1,000,000 AND A TITLE

Former Postmaster of Pueblo Sails for England to Receive Share in Estate.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Former postmaster at Pueblo, now styled Sir Dwight Lawrence Bathurst, a baronet of Lochlade, England, sailed from this port to claim the fruits of a ten-years' legal battle with the English authorities. His lawyer recently received notice that his claim to the Bathurst estate had been recognized, and that a compromise of one million dollars had been arranged.

Before his father died Bathurst was informed that a Bathurst estate in England awaited a claimant. He worked for years before he discovered proof of his ancestry. He falls heir to the title as well as the large estate, but Sir Bathurst will return to America, which he will always recognize as his home.

The establishment of his claim was made difficult by the action of a religious fanatic in the family who destroyed the family papers for the specific purpose of preventing any of the family securing money. He feared wealth would take them from the path of rectitude.

TO SAVE BOY WHO ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

SALEM, July 27.—William P. Murray, the sixteen-year-old boy of this city who attempted suicide by drinking carbolic acid as a result of his being crazed by a thunderbolt which struck the building of the United States Cartridge Company, has been declared out of danger to-day by the physicians of the St. John's Hospital.

Murray was rushed to the hospital in an auto owned by Paul Butler, and the quick action of the physicians in using the stomach pump undoubtedly saved him.

MILLIONAIRE TURNS STABLE INTO STUDIO

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney Will Use Brush in Former Stall of "Old Bob."

NEW YORK, July 27.—"Old Bob," who has pulled a stage up and down Fifth avenue for many years, was dispossessed of his stall in MacDougal alley to-day in order that Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney might move in.

In days gone by "Old Bob" and his friends lived quietly and unnoticed in the little alley, which is just half a square long. One of the colony of artists about Washington square thought the alley would be a good place for a studio. One by one the friends of "Bob" were turned out and artists turned in until the little alley became famed as the home of artists.

Mrs. Whitney, who has a magnificent Fifth avenue residence and is worth $15,000,000 in her own name, expects to do her most serious work with the brush in "Old Bob's" former home.

A LIFE SAVER

The Inhalatorium Cabinet is a life-saver. It is the only thing that will cure Consumption, Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, Rheumatism, etc., with any certainty or in any large numbers.

The Inhalatorium Cabinet has saved hundreds of lives when all hope of a cure had departed from the patient and the doctor. If you have any of the above disease the Inhalatorium treatment will cure you—it may save YOUR life.

No method of cure has ever been more enthusiastically praised by patients and physicians alike. We should like to show you some of the scientific reports of eminent specialists all over the country regarding the wonderful cures; of cases of Asthma of 30 years' standing; of cases of Consumption in which there were severe hemorrhages, great emaciation, severe night sweats, distressing cough; of cases of Nasal and Throat Catarrh cured after nearly every other treatment had been used unsuccessfully.

Look after that Catarrh now. The Summer time makes possible a quicker cure than at any other time of the year. Take advantage of this fact and come in to-day.

Consultation is free, no matter what your disease is.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

By trouncing the Tigers in the fourth game, 3 to 1, the Bostons evened up the series and for the rubber this afternoon both teams will put forth their best licks. Jesse Tannehill is likely to oppose "Wild Bill" Donovan again and needless to say the south-paw will do his prettiest to repeat the victory of Wednesday.

For close and exciting games there hasn't been anything in this city to beat the present series for a long time. Every game has been anybody's until the last man was out. Yesterday's contest was like the others. The Boston's had it 3 to 0 when the Detroits went in for their last time at bat.

Jones Starts With a Safety.

Jones started off with a single, beating Wagner's throw of his slow hit to first. A passed ball put him on second and he took third on Coughlin's fly to Sullivan. Crawford drove a hard grounder at Grimshaw, which Grim fumbled and Jones scored. Then Cobb forced Crawford and Rossman grounded to Knight. "Uncle Cy" was mighty careful not to give the Detroit heavy artillery any balls they could turn into home runs in that last inning. The veteran was invincible with men on bases and kept the Tigers hits scattered, no two coming in any one inning.

Bostons Find Mullen.

The Bostons did not find Mullen until the seventh, clever work by this pitcher nipping several good chances to score. But with two down in the seventh, Barrett scratched a hit and Sullivan was passed. Congalton scored Barrett with a safe liner to centre and Unglaub followed with a two-bagger in the same direction, sending Sully across the plate. Grim drew a pass, filling the bases, but Knight was the third out on a grounder to Downs.

In the eighth Wagner led off with a single and stole as Shaw fanned. He got third on Young's out at first and scored on Barrett's third safe hit.

Notes of the Game.

Criger was benched by "Silk" O'Laughlin. He beat a hit to Mullin in the seventh but the arbitrator called him out. "Butch" strolled back to the bench and he remarked to the umpire, en passant, "You are a big stiff." Shaw finished out the game.

* * *

Seventy-five kids from the Quincy Vacation Club were the guests of the management and the youngsters sat in the fifty-cent seats. They cheered loudly for the Bostons.

* * *

Grimshaw is not credited with a time at bat. In the four times he faced Mullin he drew two passes and made two sacrifice hits.

* * *

Armbruster and Mullin engaged in a protracted rag-chewing match from their respective benches. The chubby Detroit twirler also had a lot of fun with Congalton, Barrett and Knight, but these players had the last laugh.

* * *

Ferris sent word that he was suffering from stomach trouble and did not report for play. Grimshaw took his place and gave a rather sorry exhibition in Hobe's old stamping ground.

* * *

"Uncle Cy" took plenty of time in the ninth. He didn't want to lose the game through carelessness.

* * *

Barrett got three hits, one of them nearly winging Mullen, who ducked hurriedly.

* * *

Knight wound up the game by making a swell stop of Rossman's hard hit.

* * *

Jennings worked hard, but lost his voice to no avail.

* * *

Rain delayed the game for ten minutes, but finally the weather cleared nicely.

* * *

Last game of the series this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

* * *

The Bostons had plenty of chance to bat in a victory early in the game, but they really did not get busy until the seventh.

* * *

Young Denny Sullivan made some swell catches in centre field. Seldom has a centre fielder covered so much territory as he did yesterday.

* * *

Three of the Detroits six hits were two-baggers. "Uncle Cy" kept them well scattered. The veteran pitched one of his well regulated games.

* * *

Parent will probably report on Monday. He has been out of the game for some time.

TRIO OF BIKE STARS MEET AT BEACH TONIGHT

Some motor-paced racing that will stir the fans is on tap at the Revere track tonight when Joe Fogler, Jimmy Moran and Elmer Collins of Lynn meet in the 25-mile event. Hugh MacLean was to have been one of the trio, but yesterday injured his foot and Moran will take his place. This change will make the race a better one as MacLean is riding at the best form he has ever shown and would easily be picked as a favorite over the others, but the men are now more evenly matched and it's a tossup for the selection.

It will be Fogler's first appearance here behind pace, but the racing fans are likely to see some great speeding by the hero of two six-day races at Madison Square Garden.

He is one of the biggest, huskiest riders who ever strode a wheel and his form was in evidence when he beat the best professional sprinters at the short distance game last week.

Collins will show his friends that he has finally reached his real form, and they believe if he can beat anybody it is Moran, as he has done it before. Moran has seen the wisdom of being in trim for the hard game he is up against and is moving faster than ever.

Another great race will be the ten-mile matched affair between George Wiley of Syracuse and Patsy Logan of South Boston. Wiley is the Jimmy Michael of the track now and promises to make himself equally as famous. There will also be amateur events on the card.

CHAMP SOX DO NOT WANT MORE PLAYERS

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Manager Fielder A. Jones, of the world's baseball champions, is satisfied with his team and will not make any effort to strengthen because of its crippled condition. President Comiskey had an opportunity to get Third Baseman Doyle, of the Springfield team, who recently was sold to the New York National League team, but Manager Jones decided that there was no use getting any more players, for the present roster of players is as strong a combination as would be possible, even with one or two new men.

The leader of the world beaters would rather make the fight with the men he knows than with men he would have to get acquainted with. With the prospects that the regular Sox players will be back in the game in a short time, the manager figures that he would gain nothing by taking on new men that will have to be taught the playing secrets of the champions.

Lee Tannehill is recovering fast these days. He is practicing at the Chicago American League grounds regularly and expects that he will be in shape to take his place at third within two weeks.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

J. E. B., Boston—A full house beats a flush.

W. K. S., Pawtucket—Dan S. was distanced in the C. of C. Stakes at Detroit.

John W., Nashua—If the second gets into the ring the principal is liable to disqualification.

HOW MANAGERS TAKE VICTORY AND DEFEAT

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—Managers of major league ball clubs vary as much in the way they take victory and defeat as they do in their personal disposition. Some accept what is falling to the lot of their teams with a show of indifference, but in a majority of cases the course of events is indicated, if in no other way, by their facial expressions. The more excitable ones go farther and show by their actions what is happening, and it is just as easy to tell by them as it is by the score board who is winning and losing.

St. Louis owns two of the managers who can be used as barometers of the luck with which their teams are meeting in McCloskey, of the Cardinals, and McAleer, of the Browns. McCloskey is the more spectacular of the two, and he comes pretty near being worth the price of admission by himself. Winning or losing, McCloskey is never perfectly still, but when the team is out in front his movements are less abrupt and explosive. While the team is winning he will slide along the bench or lean over to talk to soem player and give him a verbal pat on the back. When the team starts to lose, McCloskey bounces up and down on the bench as though the latter were too hot to sit on with comfort, and the comments he lets loose are sharp, sarcastic and to the point. In fact, McCloskey has been accused of going too far, and it is possible that he does in the heat of excitement.

McAleer is less explosive than McCloskey, but feels defeat and victory just as keenly and shows it as unmistakably. McAleer's style of wearing his hat is a byword with the St. Louis fans, and it gives a pretty clear indication of how the gauge of battle is going. When the team is winning, McAleer leans back on the bench with his hat or cap tipped on the back of his head and a smile on his face. When things are going wrong he jams his hat or cap down over his eyes, leans forward with his elbows on his knees, with a frown on his face.

Of the others managers in the American and National Leagues who have seen any length of service McGraw and Griffith are the most spectacular. McGraw is vicious when his team is losing, and when the New York manager is fuming around on the bench or third base and advising his players to go into the opposing players it is sure indication that things are going wrong. Griffith is nervous and high strung, and when his team begins to lose he is inclined to look for trouble with umpires and others who thwart his plans. When winning he puts more good humor into his coaching, though he makes just about as much noise, and is always fighting for more runs, no matter how many his team has.

Jones and Chance, managers of the Sox and Cubs, respectively, are of the quieter order of coachers. Jones shows by his lack of interest in the game and the hunched forward position he assumes when his team is losing. He goes about his work quietly, and one indication of the game being close or against the White Sox is consultations between Jones and Davis, Donohue or Isbell, and there is something stirring as a rule after these. Chance takes things more stoically, and he does not indicate very markedly how the game is going.

Connie Mack, Hanlon and Donovan are all of the quieter school of managers, and they take winning or losing pretty much as a matter of course, Mack's distinctive sign of victory being a peculiar smile which he wears when things are going right. Lajoie does not make much noise and he takes things pretty evenly, while, from what could be judged of McGuire when he was here last week, he is inclined to be quiet and go along pretty evenly. Clarke of Pittsburg is somewhat like McGraw in that he gets more determined and more savage when the tide is against his club, while Tenney of Boston is inclined to sulk when things go wrong.

Three of the new managers this season, Jennings, Cantillon and Murray, are of the nervous, explosive type. Murray stays off the coaching line on the bench, but he hunches around a good deal and fires comments at his players in decidedly spicy style. Jennings and Cantillon have raised a storm of protest in some quarters by the way they coach, but there is nothing particularly harmful in it after all and a deal of amusement for the fans.

Balloon Ascension and Parachute Drop

Five thousand feet in the air, Saturday, July 27, at 3 in the afternoon, and in the evening there will be a grand display of fireworks, free vaudeville, dancing and band concert, at St. Philip's Garden Party, Commonwealth Motor and Driving Club, corner of School and Belmont streets, Mt. Auburn, 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Take Waverley cars.

FAST COLTS ENTERED IN BIG FUTURITY

When Henry Titer stepped the stallion Blue Hill (2), 2:15¾, a mile and repeat in 2:13 and 2:15½, going the last half of the first one in 1:04½, and quarter in 0:31, it vividly reminded the local horsemen that next month will be decided the big $10,000 American Horse Breeder Futurity at the Readville track.

Leading up to this event there is always a world of interest regarding the numerous candidates for the rich prize. Then, too, it is the first of the season's big futurity races, and the result gives the public their first line on what to expect from the three-year-olds of the year, sifting out the best, etc., that will continue along till the wind-up of the classic Kentucky Futurity.

It is no secret to say that in Blue Hill Henry Titer has the best-thought-of in the Readville race, but just the same it is equally as certain that he will know he has indulged in a horse race when the affair has been settled.

For among the best opposed to him are Gen. Watts, by Axworthy, that Mike Bowerman has stepped over the Lexington (Ky.) track in 2:14¼, the last quarter in 31 seconds; Aquin, the Readville trained colt that "Doc" King has been in 2:13¼ with; Blea, that has been in 2:14½ for John Young; Lucy Marlow (2), 2:17, with a trial a few days ago of 2:14¾; Capt. Dillingham, that worked in 2:16¼; C. W. Lasell's Bonnie Way (2), 2:29¾, that before going to Detroit stepped over Narragansett Park in 2:19¾, and quarters in 31 seconds; Sir Todd, with a trial of 2:16½, and several others which have beaten 2:20 quite a little.

These are the fastest moves by the stake candidates to date, but from now to the time of the contest the trainers will keep their charges in the limelight of publicity by working them some stiff miles and sharp quarters and halves.

BAY STATE TEAM BEST SHOTS

WAKEFIELD, July 27.—with a total of 3,222, the Massachusetts team won the New England Interstate match at the N. E. Rifle Association ranges, and thereby won the massive bronze trophy for the third successive time. Maine was second, with 2,977; Connecticut, third, with 2,967, and New Hampshire, fourth, with 2,883.

ELBERFELD IS SUSPENDED FOR "LAYING" DOWN

NEW YORK, July 27.—Because he has been "laying down" on him for some time now, Manager Clarke Griffith has suspended, probably for all season, Norman Elberfeld, who has been playing shortstop for the Highlanders since their organization in 1903, and "Wid" Conroy will play his position.

CARROLL HERE FOR BIG BOUT

Brooklyn Johnny Carroll who is to meet Bartly Connolly in a fifteen-round bout at Lymansville, R. I., next Wednesday night, arrived in the Hub to-day and went immediately to Highland Lake to finish his training.

With him went Fred Bradley, the ex-amateur heavy weight champion, who is just back from Philadelphia, where he won four out of six fights and made good.

The last time Connolly met Carroll the result was a draw, but both will work hard to switch the decision in his favor.

TO TRADE BURKE FOR STANKARD

SPRINGFIELD, July 27.—In all likelihood the Boston Nationals will trade Outfielder Frank Burke, with a cash consideration, for Tom Stankard, the hard-hitting second baseman of the local team. However, the former Holy Cross star will play until the close of the Connecticut League season.

BARON GRATTAN WINS IN 2:03 3-4

DETROIT, July 27.—The feature of the Grand Circuit meet at the Grosse Point track yesterday was the victory of Baron Grattan over Angus Pointer in the free-for-all pace, worth $1,500. So much did Angus make Baron extend himself in the first heat that the record time for the season, 2:03¾, was made. Baron won the next two heats, also, but in much slower time.

Testimonials

If Dr. Weinstein could bring every man to his office who is suffering with any of the many ailments peculiar to men; every man who has become weak through any cause whatsoever; every man who is suffering from Varicocele, Hydrocele, Nervous Debility, Nervous Dyspepsia, Stricture, or Blood Poisoning; and present the testimony of a few of the hundreds of his former patients, now healthy and vigorous, all skepticism would take wings, every doubt vanish, and in their place would spring the flame of hope, and conviction, that they too may enjoy the full measure of health and manhood.

Dr. Weinstein doesn't make promises for a consideration, nor does he make special offers to induce patients to place themselves under his treatment. His patients, for the most part, come through recommendations of their friends who have been cured, and every man is treated with the same painstaking care and thoroughness.

Dr. Weinstein's charges are based on the exigencies of each individual case. The principal consideration is how quickly and how thoroughly a permanent cure may be accomplished, and the charges are made as reasonable as possible with this end in view.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Manager Tenney of the Doves, is making all kinds of offers to procure Artie Hofman, the star all-around player of the Cubs, but so far none has been tempting to Manager Chance.

Originally, the Hub leader offered a certain sum of money for Hofman, but Chance told him that he could offer a million dollars for any man on his team, but there would be nothing doing. However, the local manager added, that if Tenney desired a trade, and Chance thought it would strengthen his club he would exchange any man or group of men on the team.

Have No Use for Young "Cy."

Manager Tenney proposed to trade "Young Cy" Young, who has been pitching poorly for the Bostons this season for Hofman, but Chance said that he would have no use for Young.

It is hard to see what trade the Bostons could make with the Chicagos that would strengthen the latter in any possible way.

Pat Flaherty, who has been as successful as any pitcher in the country against the Cubs this season, will most likely pitch for the Bostons this afternoon, while "Three Fingered" Brown, will probably twirl for the home team.

The series now stands one apiece and lots of interest is being displayed in to-day's contest.

The Doves captured a hard-hitting contest from the home talent yesterday, 9 to 7.

Doves' Hard Hitting.

In the second inning the visitors lit on Carl Lundgren's delivery and scored four runs. He gave way to Jack Pfiester, who was slammed for five runs in the seventh.

Gus Dorner relieved Vive Lindaman in the second inning, and although he was hit rather freely, managed to keep the Cubs from overhauling the Hubites.

Young Durby pitched the ninth inning for the locals, and did the best work of any twirler during the game.

GANS TO MEET JIMMY BURNS ON AUGUST 16

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—There are no more "ifs" about the Gans-Burns match. Checks representing $7,000 were placed in James Jeffries' hands yesterday afternoon, and Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club, Selig and Burns attached their signatures to the articles that call for a twenty-round contest at 133 pounds ringside, stripped, on the night of August 16 before that club.

Selig returned to San Francisco last night, after promising to land Joe Gans in Los Angeles on next Friday morning. Gans is doing light training in the North.

Jimmy Burns is doing faithful training at the East Side A. C. here in anticipation of his fight with Gans.

Notes of the Harness Horses

"Doc" King has worked Nance O'Neil, the first sired by Todd, in 2:16¼, and thinks she is a sure 2:10 mare. Alice Bruce, by Alliewood, he has worked in 2:13¼, and she is getting pretty near ready to take to the races.

Strongheart, the two-year-old by Todd, has taken a record of 2:26¼. He is out of Peter B. Bradley's mare, Nelly Boca, 2:18¾.

The syndicate-owned stallion Aquilin, in Henry Titer's stable, is the talk of the horsemen at Readville through the showing of his get, as there are no less than six colts and fillies by him that have already shown miles in 2:30 or better.

Hallie Rocket, 2:11, is now the proud mother of a filly foal by Bingen.

Benjamin Pope and A. C. Haley are the owners of a three-year-old by Peter the Great, 2:07¾, out of Mrs. Jack, that Henry Titer has worked in 2:19¾, and quarters at a 2:12 gait.

Jimmy Carpenter has driven A. S. Bigelow's recent purchase, Banonia, a mile in 2:15¼.

"Doc" King states that by the time of the American Horse Breeder Futurity at Readville next month his Aquin will be able to step three times right in 2:10.

Ralph B. Williams got a sure enough trotter when he purchased Codero, as in his maiden start this year he was close second in 2:10¼.

Jack Crabtree's good trotter, Nutboy, 2:07¼, has gone wrong, requiring a let-up for a while.

E. Geers up to this week had won eight races out of ten starts, but his percentage of wins dropped off a whole lot since mingling with the high society of the Grand Circuit at Detroit.

Will Evans of Lexington, Ky., says that his Todd two-year-old can now trot twice in better than 2:15.

Kentucky Todd (2), 2:14¾, has turned the Cleveland track in 2:12¾ is the latest report.

Elderone, 2:05¼, the notorious pacer of a few years ago, is dead.

Frank X. Fitzpatrick of Cambridge owns a full brother of Codero, and he is paid up in the Breeder Futurity at Readville.

THOUSANDS SEE GIRL ENTOMBED BY HYPNOTIST

Crowds Shudder as They Gaze on Florence Gibson in Grave at Vanity Fair.

UNDER GROUND 7 DAYS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 27.—In a lonely grave on one of the hillsides in the great enclosure of Vanity Fair lies the living, though apparently inanimate, body of pretty Florence Gibson of Riverside, who last evening passed under the strange hypnotic spell of the Hindu, Omar Sami.

Thousands stood spellbound around the grandstand where the Vanity Fair open-air circus is given daily when the fantastically dressed Oriental healer stepped before the crowds and coolly announced that he proposed to hypnotize Miss Gibson and actually bury her alive for seven days.

Then the girl, who is not more than twenty-two, slight, shrinking yet brave, stepped forward, in answer to questions, declared that she was entirely willing to be buried alive in the gloomy, yawning tomb nearby. To bind the compact she signed a statement declaring that the act was of her own free will.

Gazing steadily for a few moments upon an ivory talisman from some far-distant shrine of Buddha and all the while under the fixed gaze of the swarthy Hindu magician the girl began to totter and she would have fallen had strong arms not tenderly held her while she passed from consciousness into the mysterious place where spirits are locked while under the hypnotic spell.

Band Plays Funeral March.

As the Vanity Fair band played a solemn funeral march the frail form of the girl was borne into a little tent nearby under which, in an open grave, lay the casket in which she is now resting. The girl was lowered into the casket, the lid placed upon it and a wooden air shaft fixed firmly right over the place her head lies. Then the earth was shovelled back into place and the grave filled.

An electric light was lowered through the airshaft and far down in the dark depths the sleeping form of Florence Gibson could easily be seen. There the girl is to lie until Omar Sami thinks fit to break the strange spell and release his fair prisoner.

"Are you afraid to be buried alive?" Miss Gibson was asked by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter a few minutes before she passed under the hypnotic spell.

"I'm a little nervous over it," was the faint reply and the girl looked the truth of her words.

"How does it feel to pass under the influence of Omar Sami's power?" was asked.

All is a Blank.

"I get sleepy and then numb and then —well, it's all a blank until I return to consciousness. That's the best way to describe my sensations," she said.

After the girl was buried and the great throng gazed fearfully down on her, Omar Sami said:

"I have buried some fifty persons alive in this way. The longest term of living imprisonment I ever gave a subject was forty days. The man was a Kaffir, and I buried him in India. I have never had any trouble. Miss Gibson is a good subject and when I have the grave opened and take her from the casket and break the spell in which she now lies she will never feel the least discomfort."

From now on day and night a committee of citizens of East Providence will guard the tomb to see that no harm comes near the girl and who will be able to attest that she has really been placed under Sami's occult power.

For Americans to Think About

Would a Government by Corporation-Owned Judges Be Really REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT?

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Every citizen of the United States is interested in the present struggle between the State and national judges in North Carolina.

Here is the story, very briefly:

The people of the State of North Carolina passed a law forbidding railroad tickets to be sold for more than two and one-quarter cents per mile. The penalty for violating the law was a $500 fine in each case, with the usual possibility of imprisonment for contempt of court.

The Southern Railway ignored the law passed by the people of North Carolina. The Southern Railway, of course, gets its revenues from the people, BUT IT ALSO DESPISES THE PEOPLE.

It has been accustomed to owning enough of the judges and other officials to make the people extremely unimportant.

An energetic State judge, backed up by the Governor of the State, proceeded against the Southern Railway. The railway was fined $30,000 and two of its officials were sent to prison.

Thereupon United States Judge Pritchard immediately ordered the officials of the railway released on habeas corpus. Then he issued an injunction ordering the State not to collect the fine.

In addition, he denounced the law which the people had passed as "confiscation." This United States judge threatened to put in jail any State judge or State official that dared to enforce the laws passed by the State.

Now notice that this judge takes this action ON HIS OWN AUTHORITY. He decides that he and the Southern Railway should know better than anybody else what the people ought to do, can do and cannot do.

The State passed laws. The railway violated the laws with utter contempt for the State and the people. And the United States judge sustains the railway, releases the convicted railway officials, forbids the State to fine the insolent corporations, and so the matter stands.

It is stated that troops of the United States government will uphold Judge Pritchard, and that the railway, backed by the United States judge and by the United States army, will proceed to violate the laws of the State according to its own free whims.

Here is the thing for every reader to think about earnestly:

JUDGE PRITCHARD WAS A LAWYER FOR THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY BEFORE HE WAS PUT UPON THE UNITED STATES BENCH.

We make no assertion whatever as to the influence upon this judge's mind of his former occupation as a railway attorney, and we make no assertion whatever as to the effect upon his mind and judicial actions of the moneys that may have been paid him by the railway before he was put upon the bench.

We ask you to notice what has happened in this case when a railway lawyer, in obedience to the railway commands, is made a United States judge.

A man formerly the hired lawyer of the Southern Railway is now on the bench representing the power of the United States Government.

The people of North Carolina pass a law trying to control the Southern Railway, which is notoriously dishonest, exorbitant in its charges, REGARDLESS OF THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

The Legislature of the State passes a law in obedience to the people's wishes. The Governor and the courts try to enforce the law, and the United States judge, FORMERLY THE RAILWAY EMPLOYE, ISSUES AN INJUNCTION WHICH PROTECTS THE RAILWAY, and THREATENS TO JAIL THE PEOPLE'S REPRESENTATIVES if they carry out the law.

Is not that something for the American people to think over rather earnestly? Have you any idea how many of these corporation lawyers are now on the bench? Do you remember that Mr. Knox, the lawyer of the Steel Trust and other trusts, was actually made Attorney-General of the United States? This man, who got his fortune from trusts, was put into the only position threatening to trusts, and now they are talking about making him candidate of the trust party for President.

The power of the judges in this country is the supreme power. The court of the United States can overrule the local courts. The Supreme Court of the United States can overrule the United States Congress, the House of Representatives and the Senate combined.

Is it not clear to you that corporations, the railways and trusts can treat the citizens with contempt as long as they can control enough judges and enough of the other officials, have their own laws passed, or ignore ill safety laws that they don't like?

Judge Pritchard is mentioned simply because he happens to be one of these railway lawyers promoted to the United States bench, and because he figures immediately as the judicial defender of the very railway that formerly hired him.

We do not say that he is acting insincerely. We do not say that he is not acting absolutely in accordance with his conscience.

But we do say that the people have a right to form their own opinion in regard to those matters, and we say that the people have got to make up their minds to scrutinize closely the appointments of the judges, WHO ARE THEIR REAL RULERS, AND WHO, AS JEFFERSON SAID, "MAY BECOME THE COUNTRY'S GREAT DANGER."

A Midsummer Political Dinner

The Difference Between It and Some Others

The Independence League banquet in Springfield last Wednesday differed from some recent political "feeds" in several interesting respects.

It was got up, managed and PAID FOR by the DINERS THEMSELVES.

It was spontaneous. It was a product of the place in which it was held. No group of hired men, working for a candidate, arranged it in Boston and then sprung it on the public as a dinner given by the "Hampden County Blue Devils," or something of that sort.

The men who came to it were well-behaved, well-dressed and intelligent, and most of them were young and GOOD-LOOKING. There was not a single drunken or boisterous man among them.

It was a good dinner. Every man got his dollar's worth.

It was not a food-and-drink riot.

All of this is apart from the speechmaking, which was the real reason for the dinner.

Although the dinner was served an hour late and the speaking did not begin until ten o'clock, nearly every one of the hundred and seventy-five persons present sat there, earnestly listening and cheering until AFTER MIDNIGHT.

The Springfield Republican, an honest newspaper, devoted the space to the meeting to which it was entitled as a matter of important news, and said it demonstrated that the League is to be a real factor in the coming campaign and one to be reckoned with by the other parties.

The members of the League undoubtedly appreciate the Republican's courtesy, but they don't estimate their own strength in such modest terms.

Ve vas all well at home mit der exception dot your mother's cousin, Rudolph Hausenhauer, inventioned a new style of a self-folding safety pin und he has been paid a small fortune for der patent, mit der result dot Rudolph is too happy for vords to utter.

I vent down to Oscar Hauserschmidt's chenning cafe vun day last week to congratulation Rudolph.

Ven I found him he hat der nickel-in-der-slouch orchestra turned on so he could dance, und he vas shaking all oder his stoutness mit choy und happiness.

"Sit down, Dinky," set Rudolph, "dere is only sigateen bars more of dis moosic, den I vill chein you. Did you notice der staccato movement of my left leg ven I make der reverse movement of der rautine? Und did you notice how I put der pitzyoate movement in der elbow ven I do der double shuffle?"

"You vas happy, Rudolph!" I set; "please let me remove some of my congratulationings und hand dem to you."

"Happy is not der vord," set Rudolph, eggsecuting a heel und toe obligato mit der left foot und smiling loudly from der double chin upvards. "I am consumed mit a great choy. I feel like Alexander der Great after der battle of Antietam. I feel like Napoleon ven he climbed der stormy heights of Bunco Hill mit der cinematograph machines all around him, belching forth deir deadly fire at der rate of vun thousand per second. I feel like Chullus Caesar before his friends got on to him. I feel like Chorge Washington. I feel like setting dem up. Two beers—not vill you hat?"

"Not any, Rudolph," I set; "I yust vish to hat my congratulationings put in der vaste basket mid der udders."

"Py Chhinneddy! Such a lot of dem!" set Rudolph. "It seems to me dot efery man, woman und child in der Union States has vished me der compilmentaries of der season. Even if I could stop dancing I doan'd dink I could count up all der friends I hat."

"No, Rudolph, I set, "no successful man can efer count his friends. It is only der man dot fails dot can count dem, und dere is no danger dot he vill sprain his voice vile he is doing it. Success is der hothouse vare der flowers of flattery grow. Sveet odors squeeze out through der vindows, und der whole vorld vishes to get inside und help der lucky owner to pluck der roses. Failure is an icehouse, und all dot flourishes dere is der frozen face und a kick in der back part of der vaistcoat ven der owner vas not looking."

"My, my, Dinky!" set Rudolph, single-stepping mit der left foot, "you hat got der passimistickals."

"No, Rudolph," I set, "I vas too old-fashioned for such a ding as der pessimistickals, und, besides, I took some sulphur und molasses day before yesterday und I defiance it. On mit der dance, Rudolph, und don't mind me."

"I feel so happy," chuggled Rudolph, "because ven I hat no money I vanted vat I could not get, und now dot I hat money I doan'd vant it because I can get it. Nefer dit der sky look so blue, Dinky, because I am now looking at it through a roll of bills, yes!"

"It is a pleasant vorld ven ve vin, Rudolph," I set, "und it vould not be a bad vorld ven ve lose if some of der peoples in der audience vould sit still. Der trouble is, Rudolph, dot too many of der spectators consider demselfs der referee. Ven a man gets groggy und goes to his knees der vas all so eggstremely anxious to count him out dey forget to gif him a helping hand. Mit dese few vords I vill pass up anudder big bunch of congratulationings und leef you alone mit your chag of choy."

Ven I vent ouid Rudolph hat upset vun table und four chairs, und he vas only in der middle of der automobile buck. Yours mit luff,

Scattered Thoughts

By James J. Montague

Arms, legs, elbows and fingers all think as well as the brain.—Scientist.

FOR years I've often wondered why
I lacked determination;
I've always let good things get by
By fatal vacillation;
I've lately learned that it's the jar
Of discord in my being;
My elbows, knees and shoulders are
Forever disagreeing.

A BURGLAR visits me by night,
My feet decide to boot him;
My hands, however, think it's quite
The proper dodge to shoot him.
And while they're arguing what to do
To seal that burglar's doom,
The latter leisurely goes through
My clothes and leaves the room.

WHEN I take transatlantic trips
My eyes elect to follow
The courses of the stately ships
And watch the wavelets wallow;
My stomach, on the other hand,
Thinks dolefully of dinner,
Declares for rest and calm—and
It's usually the winner.

WHEN motor cars honk-honk at me,
My legs urge that I fly them.
My spirit tells me earnestly
To stand there and defy them.
I stand there, in that helpless case
Until, in just a minute,
They call an ambulance and place
My fractured person in it.

EACH member has a different thought
When sudden pain surprises them,
I've really come to think I ought
To try to harmonize them;
Their interests all are surely mine,
They must have speed communion,
Get all the parts of me in fine
And form them in a union!

All in a Day's News

By Wex Jones

SEOUL, Corea.—The Emperor abdicated the throne to-day. His act was entirely voluntary, and had no connection with the fact that five regiments of Japanese troops were stationed outside the palace. It is said that the Emperor has applied for a job as Subway guard in New York.

PHILADELPHIA.—Senator Knox told a number of friends yesterday that Vice-President Fairbanks had a strike on his hands. The waitress he is accustomed to rescue from drowning demanded a raise of pay before she would fall in any more puddles. Wild cheers and hoots greeted this sally, with cries of "Knock for Knox, the Presidential knocker!"

ST. PETERSBURG.—That the interval between arrest and execution must in no case exceed twelve hours is the latest order from the palace. By this means it is hoped that fewer innocent persons will escape. The Czar yesterday tested a bombproof straw hat designed for Summer wear. He tested it on the head of General Shrinkaway. Later the Czar made a generous provision for Shrinkaway's orphaned children. Fashions in hats will not change at the court this year.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—Telephones have at last been installed here. It is said that the harem central is kept busy switching cousins off the wire.

OYSTER BAY.—The Sagamore Hill load of hay has now been pitched into the barn 72 times, and is nearly worn out. A new load has been ordered from New York.

WASHINGTON.—Orders have been wired to the fleet, which is to sail for Guam at once.

Later—The Navy Department has decided that it will be quicker and less expensive to tow Guam to the fleet.

PARIS.—The members of the Cabinet went up in a balloon to-day and then came down again.

POKESQUEAMAKAGOG, Maine.—A large moose was seen in the woods to-day reading one of Dr. Long's nature stories. The moose shook its head so violently at one passage that its antlers fell off and were picked up by a passing automobilist, who is now using them as a horn.

THE HAGUE.—Members of the Peace Conference express themselves as disgusted with the whole affair. They say every session has been as peaceful as a pinochle game, and they have lost all hope of a good scrap before the end of the conference. Some excitement was caused by a report, later discovered to be unfounded, that Germany was establishing a frontier guard of Teddy bears.
